84-year-old priest was accused in Bhima-Koregaon violence case

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
MUMBAI

Tribal rights activist Father Stan Swamy, 84, who was an accused in the Bhima-Koregaon caste violence case, passed away on Monday afternoon, the Bombay High Court was told.

Dr. Ian D'souza, medical director of the Holy Family Hospital where Fr. Swamy was admitted on May 29 after having contracted COVID-19 while in Taloja jail, told a division Bench of Justices S.S. Shinde and N.J. Jamadar that he had pulmonary infection, post COVID-19 complications in the lungs and pneumonia. Dr. D'Souza said the Jesuit priest suffered cardiac arrest at 4.30 a.m. on July 4 and was put on ventilator. He never regained consciousness.

Senior advocate Mihir Desai, representing Fr. Swamy, said, "We have no grievance against the hospital. However, we cannot say the same thing about the National Investigation Agency [NIA] and State authorities. I am seeking a judicial probe into this as there was a delay of 10 days in taking him to the hospital from jail."

The Bench said, "...this is shocking news. We passed that order ... to take him to the hospital of his choice. We have no words to express our condolences."

Mr. Desai said the NIA did not seek his custody even for a day and he was sent to Taloja jail as soon as he was arrested from Ranchi on October 9, 2020. He requested the court to pass an order to hand over the social worker's body to Father Frazer, his friend and former principal of Xavier's college.

Mr. Desai sought the submission of all medical reports and the post-mortem report to the court.

Fr. Swamy was shifted to the private hospital from Taloja jail on May 29 after directions from the High Court. He tested positive for COVID-19 on May 30.

He also had lower back pain and bilateral hearing loss among other ailments, and was suffering from Parkinson's disease. His request for a sipper to drink water was turned down.

The Jesuit priest, through videoconferencing, told the court on May 21: "I am eating less and less and my co-accused are worried about me. I would prefer to suffer and die like this in Taloja jail than be admitted to J.J. Hospital. Only one thing that I would request the judiciary is to consider interim bail. That is the only request."

SC aghast that Section 66A of IT Act is still used

Provision was struck down 6 years ago

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL
NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday found it "distressing", "shocking" and "terrible" that people were still booked and tried under Section 66A of the Information Technology (IT) Act even six years after it struck down the provision as unconstitutional and a violation of free speech.

Section 66A had prescribed three years' imprisonment if a social media message caused "annoyance" or was found "grossly offensive".

The court, in the Shreya Singhal judgment authored by Justice Rohinton F. Nariman in March 2015, had concluded that the provision was vague and worded arbitrarily.

On Monday, senior advocate Sanjay Parikh and advocate Aparna Bhat, for the People's Union for Civil Liberties (PUCL), said the number of cases registered under Section 66A had actually increased post the judgment.

"What is going on is terrible, distressing! We will issue notice," Justice Nariman, heading a three-judge Bench comprising Justices K.M. Joseph and B.R. Gavai, exclaimed.

"Only as a footnote" Attorney General K.K. Venugopal pointed out that law books published post the verdict featured the non-existent Section 66A "in full".

"The police officer, while registering a case, looks at only the Section in the main text... The fact that the Section has been struck down is given only as a footnote...", he submitted.

Twitter failed to comply with IT rules: Centre

Ministry files affidavit in Delhi HC

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Centre on Monday informed the Delhi High Court that micro-blogging site Twitter had failed to comply with India's law regulating tech companies, losing its immunity as "intermediaries".

The Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY), in an affidavit filed before the court, stated that despite three months time being granted to all Significant Social Media Intermediaries (SSMIs) to comply with the Information Technology (IT) Rules 2021, Twitter had failed to fully comply with the same.

Officer's resignation

Twitter, last week, had informed the High Court that the interim Resident Grievance Officer and the interim Nodal Contact Person in India had resigned from their positions in June.

The tech giant stated that it was in the final stages of appointing replacements; meanwhile, "the grievances of Indian users are being addressed by the Grievance Officer".

The MeitY, however, pointed out that as per the details gleaned from Twitter's website, grievances from India were currently being handled by its personnel situated in the United States, "which amounts to non-compliance with the IT Rules 2021".

The MoHFW also said no privacy impact assessment of the use of FRT was conducted prior to its deployment. "Facial recognition authentication is used as one of the methods for Aadhaar authentication for online verification of beneficaries," the ministry said in its affidavit. "The MoHFW has conducted a privacy impact assessment of the use of FRT for Aadhaar authentication for online verification of beneficiaries. The results of the assessment have been submitted to the Data Protection Authority of India (DPA) for review and approval. The DPA has not yet issued a final decision on the matter." The ministry also stated that no additional procurement had been made for the implementation of FRT-based verification, and a pilot project for such authentication is still under way.

Withdraw action against AUD student, says Sisodia

Deputy Chief Minister Manish Sisodia on Monday directed the Principal Secretary of Higher Education to ensure that no disciplinary action is taken against the Ambedkar University student, on whom a fine of ₹5,000 was also imposed by the varsity.

Mr. Sisodia said the fine, imposed on the student by the university for allegedly disrupting a convocation ceremony, be cancelled.

Mr. Sisodia said: "Firstly, no action should be taken against any student for expressing a viewpoint that is different from the government or the university unless the statement damages the social fabric of our country or is against our constitutional values. Monsoon likely to reach city by July 10

NEW DELHI

The monsoon, which has currently stalled and is at the borders of Northwest India, is expected to revive over the weekend in Delhi, said the India Meteorological Department (IMD) on Monday.

"The southwest monsoon is likely to advance over remaining parts of western Uttar Pradesh, some more parts of Punjab, Haryana and Rajasthan, and Delhi around July 10. The weather system is likely to cause increased rainfall activity over northwest and central India from July 10," said a notice.

This is predicated on a low-pressure area that is likely to form over the northwest Bay of Bengal off the north Andhra Pradesh-south Odisha coasts around July 11 in preparation of which rain-bearing winds are expected to establish from later this week.

Delayed by over a week

The normal date for the arrival of the monsoon over Delhi is June 30 with an error window of two weeks. However, the IMD had in early June said the monsoon could reach Delhi earlier by June 15 but this didn't happen.

Typically the monsoon covers the entire stretch of India by July 8.

Meteorologists have said the ongoing weak spell of monsoon started on June 19. Till then, the monsoon had made rapid progress since its advent over Kerala and progressed quickly, bringing in rain that was over 40% more than what is normal for the first fortnight of June. So far, India has got 20.7 cm of rainfall, slightly less than the 20.8 cm that is expected until the first week of July.

HC declines to interfere with DU's exam decision

Matter pertains to Faculty of Law

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Monday declined to interfere with DU's decision to conduct online open book exam for intermediate semesters of its law course, which could not be held last year due to COVID-19.

Justice Pratik Jalan said he was not going to allow students to dictate terms of examination of a professional course while hearing four petitions by students of second and final-year of Faculty of Law, Delhi University.

Mode of exam

The Law Faculty Dean said the examination was likely to be conducted in July and another round of exams would be held in September for the benefit of students who are unable to sit in the first round. DU's counsel said the mode of examination – whether online, offline, blended or assignment-based – was left to the discretion of the institute concerned by the Bar Council of India.

One of the final-year students had argued that online open book examination for last year's intermediate semesters semester II and IV was not in the interest of students.

The plea pressed for an assignment-based examination. The plea argued that the dates for the online open book examination might clash with the other entrance examinations that the final-year students might take for further studies.

HC refuses to hear Gulfisha's plea against 'illegal detention'

Court unhappy with her counsel's conduct during hearing

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Monday declined to hear student activist Gulfisha Fatima's plea against her alleged illegal detention in a Delhi riots case after taking serious note to her advocate Mehmood Pracha's taking recourse to "heckling" during the hearing.

A Bench of Justice Siddharth Mridul and Justice Anup Jairam Bhambhani ordered that Ms. Fatima's petition be placed before another Bench on Friday.

"Instead of addressing us on merits, Mehmood Pracha is taking recourse to heckling and seeking to take recourse to facts not in the petition. Listen before another Bench," the court said.

"We refuse to be addressed by someone who does not know the basics of law," the HC remarked.

Delhi riots case

The court was hearing a plea by Ms. Fatima seeking for a direction to release her in an Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA) case relating to alleged larger conspiracy that led to north-east Delhi riots in February last year. In the habeas corpus petition, Ms. Fatima claimed that her detention in judicial custody was illegal and invalid.

Mr. Pracha argued that Ms. Fatima was in continued illegal detention and as per a Supreme Court decision, only a special court under the NIA Act, and not a Sessions court, had the power to extend remand. Mr. Pracha also claimed that as of date, there was no remand order in the present case.

As the HC said that the remand order was not part of the pleadings in the case, Mr. Pracha urged the Bench to take his statement on record. To this, the Bench said, "You are not addressing a rally. You are addressing a court. Show us from your pleadings... File an affidavit to say there is no remand order today. You can't argue statement of facts at the Bar."

High-security labels to check duty evasion

PRESS TRUST OF INDIA
NEW DELHI

Special excise adhesive labels, inspection teams and a state-of-the-art lab are some of the steps planned by the Delhi government to regulate the conduct of retail liquor vends and check tax evasion and sale of spurious alcohol.

The new excise policy 2021-22, which was approved in June, was uploaded on the excise dept.'s website on Monday. According to the policy, the excise department has introduced Excise Adhesive Labels with high-end security features manufactured by Security Printing and Minting Corporation of India Limited to avoid tax evasion and plug leakages in the supply chain.

Taking serious note of the gravity of the allegations, senior advocate and Bar Council of Delhi chairman Ramesh Gupta ordered the constitution of a Special Disciplinary Committee to investigate the matter.

The BCD has asked the lawyer to appear before it on July 16.

'BJP is seeking revenge on farmers in agitation-related cases'

Central govt. is trying to replace Delhi-appointed lawyers: AAP

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Terming it "vengeful", the AAP on Monday accused the BJP of "attempting to replace" Delhi government-appointed lawyers with "its own" to allegedly harass and defame innocent farmers in criminal cases filed in relation to the ongoing farmers' agitation.

AAP national spokesperson Raghu Chadha alleged the BJP wanted to replace the Delhi government's lawyers not with the intention of bringing justice to the farmers but to "seek revenge". "A few days ago, a virtual meeting took place between the L-G and the Delhi Home Minister, wherein BJP's intentions became crystal clear," he alleged.

"The BJP's appointee, the Lieutenant-Governor, said they will remove Delhi govt's lawyers and that special public prosecutors in these matters," Mr. Baijal stated.

"These cases require careful handling in a time-bound manner in view of the gravity of the offences and implications for law and order. Therefore, I see no reason why the proposal of the police should not be agreed to," Mr. Baijal stated. There was, he also stated, "no reason to suspect" that special public prosecutors wouldn't perform their duty fearlessly and impartially as officers of the court.

Punjab Chief Minister Captain (Retd.) Amarinder Singh on Monday accused Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal of failing to provide free power to the farmers in the national capital.

He also accused the AAP supremo of making false promises on "free power" in Punjab with an eye on the 2022 Assembly polls.

₹9.80 per unit for industrial power, the Congress government in Punjab is levying a subsidised tariff of ₹5 per unit to attract industry, and the State has witnessed more than ₹85,000 crore worth of investment visible on the ground in the last 4 years. Subsidised power is being given to 1,43,812 industrial units with an annual subsidy of ₹2,226 crore," he said in state-

In sharp contrast to Punjab, where my government was giving free power worth ₹6,735 crore to 13,721 farmers, the AAP government in Delhi had made no effort whatsoever to extend similar support to the agricultural community there," the Chief Minister said.

Capt. Amarinder said the Delhi government was befooling the people by putting a small amount into one pocket, by way of 200 units of free domestic power, and taking away a higher amount from the other pocket by way of high tariffs being paid by the shopkeepers, industry and farmers for commercial and agriculture power.

Rajasthan Governor Kalraj Mishra on Monday ordered legal action against those involved in an alleged incident of "unsolicited sale" of his biography to Vice-Chancellors of universities on the Raj Bhawan premises.

The book, Nimitt Maatra Hoon Main, was released at a function in the Raj Bhawan here on July 1.

Mr. Mishra took cognisance of the reports about 19 copies of the biography and their bills being given to the Vice-Chancellors after the launch ceremony and expressed "deep displeasure" over the controversy.

A statement from the Raj Bhawan said the Governor had directed the officials to seek an explanation from those involved and take action against them.

Chief Minister Ashok Gehlot, Lok Sabha Speaker Om Birla and Vice-Chancellors of all the 27 State universities had attended the function marking the unveiling of Mr. Mishra's biography.

Three teens found dead in lake in Telangana

HYDERABAD
Three teenage girls were found dead in a lake on the outskirts of their village at Singanagao in Nirmal district, Telangana, on Monday. The victims were identified as Sunitha, 16, her sister Vaishali, 14, and their cousin Anjali, 15. Although evidence suggested it was a case of accidental drowning, the police would investigate all angles to rule out their suspicions. Ch. Praveen Kumar, Superintendent of Police, Nirmal district, told The Hindu.

LDF leaders should face trial, says SC

Current Education Minister is among those facing charges for vandalism in Kerala Assembly in 2015

KRISHNADAS RAJAGOPAL
NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday said it will not condone the behaviour of Kerala's Left Democratic Front (LDF) leaders, including the current Education Minister V. Sivankutty, who created a ruckus and indulged in vandalism on the floor of the Legislative Assembly, disrupting the presentation of the budget in 2015.

The televised images from the day of the incident, during the United Democratic Front government's tenure, show legislators coming to blows in the House and hurling chairs, computers and other public property, soon after the then Finance Minister K.M. Mani began his budget speech. The LDF MLAs were protesting against Mr. Mani, citing the corruption allegations against him.

charges of criminal trespass, mischief and destruction of public property. The State government and the accused have separately appealed to the court for withdrawal of the case.

A Bench of Justices D.Y. Chandrachud and M.R. Shah, however, took a prima facie view against the conduct of the MLAs. Justice Chandrachud said legislators accused of destroying public property should face trial or there would be "absolutely no deterrent to this kind of behaviour".

During the hearing, the court disagreed with the Kerala government's view that the then Opposition MLAs were only acting in "public interest" and exercising their "right to protest".

"What is the larger 'public interest' in obstructing the presentation of the State's financial budget? Prima facie, we have to take a very strict view of such behaviour. We will not condone such behaviour by MLAs – throwing mics, chairs on the floor of the House," Justice Chandrachud told senior advocate Ranjit Kumar, who appeared for the State.

Justice Shah wanted to know what "message" the MLAs had intended to give the public with their behaviour.

Justice Chandrachud said the case would be listed on July 15.

"These are people's representatives. What will the people think seeing their leaders behave like this on the floor of the House?" Justice Shah asked.

Locus standi questioned

When Mr. Kumar said prior sanction of the Speaker was required before registration of criminal cases against the MLAs, Justice Shah questioned the State government's locus standi in seeking withdrawal of the case against the legislators.

"Why are you [the State] saying all this? It is for the accused to make the plea, and not for the State. The State cannot seek withdrawal of the case. That is the prerogative of the Public Prosecutor," Justice Shah repeatedly pointed out.

Justice Chandrachud said the case would be listed on July 15.

Both States write to Central Ministries seeking action

Andhra Pradesh and Telangana have intensified the dispute of sharing of the Krishna waters – particularly in the wake of works on the Rayalaseema Lift Irrigation Scheme (RLIS) taken up by Andhra Pradesh and power generation at three inter-State projects by Telangana – by shooting letters to the Ministry of Jal Shakti, the Ministry of Environment and Forests and filing contempt plea in the National Green Tribunal (NGT).

In his letter to Jal Shakti Minister Gajendra Singh Shekhawat, Mr. Reddy sought notifying the jurisdiction of the KRMB covering all off-takes of irrigation and power on common reservoirs to stop indiscriminate drawal solely for power generation by Telangana.

Meanwhile, a few senior engineers in the Irrigation Department of Telangana, who spoke to The Hindu, said Mr. Reddy's letter to the MoEF amounted to openly influencing an independent committee [EAC] of MoEF and the Krishna River Management Board (KRMB).

Heavy weight

Punjab Chief Minister Amarinder Singh is facing a crisis born out of his very success

The crisis in the Congress in Punjab has been smouldering beneath the surface for a long time, before the current eruption. Until a few months ago, Chief Minister Amarinder Singh had appeared invincible and poised to lead the party to a second consecutive victory in the Assembly election due early next year. Rebel leader Navjot Singh Sidhu's relentless open battle against the Chief Minister has now cast a long shadow over the party's prospects. Mr. Sidhu, a party hopper driven by personal ambition, has by default become the champion of the resentment among party MLAs and workers against the Chief Minister's unilateralism. Mr. Singh was the sole architect of the Congress victory in 2017. After winning 77 of the State's 117 Assembly seats then, its victory march continued through the 2019 Lok Sabha and local body elections. But a streak of arrogance probably disconnected him from some sections of the party. His very strength – he is head and shoulders above any alternative, including Mr. Sidhu, within the Congress – seems to have opened up a weakness: so sure of his own indispensability, he had little time or patience for some of those in the lower rungs of the party. Congress MLAs complain of humiliation at the hand of bureaucrats and found their lives overshadowed by the giant figure of Mr. Singh.

Also, the performance of the Government is coming under scrutiny too. High power tariffs, power cuts, a high unemployment rate and unchecked drug trafficking have exposed the chinks in the armour of the Chief Minister. Faced with bad options, the Congress central leadership appointed a committee headed by Mallikarjun Kharge. It met with around 150 party leaders and submitted a report but that has only opened a Pandora's box. The Chief Minister took the committee deliberations as a slight, and his detractors, as an open season. Meanwhile, the unmistakable, though oblique, endorsement of Mr. Sidhu by the Gandhi family has complicated the scene further. The former cricketer is a recent entrant in Congress, after a cushy stopover in the BJP as Member of Parliament and contemplating a detour to the Aam Aadmi Party. As a life-long careerist with a reputation for a short temper, he is hardly the leader that critics of the Chief Minister yearn for. Punjab politics is in a churn due to the farmer agitation and an ongoing realignment of political forces. The SAD and BSP have formed a new alliance, and the BJP is left alone. Agitating farmers may have political plans in the coming months. The Congress central leadership and Mr. Singh must work together than at cross purposes to bring order within the party, so that the Government can steer the State's progress without the dramatic distractions.

Trump again

The fraud charges are an opportunity for the GOP to find new leadership

The Trump Organization, the company owned by former U.S. President Donald Trump, has been charged by authorities in New York state on 15 felony counts including for committing a scheme to defraud, conspiracy, grand larceny, criminal tax fraud and falsifying business records. Prosecutors have also brought charges against a "sweeping and audacious" fraudulent scheme involving the firm's CFO taking more than $1.7 million in undeclared remuneration from the company for personal expenses. While Mr. Trump has not been charged in this legal salvo, it is possible that that might happen in the future, should the investigation determine that he engaged in criminal conduct. Already, Mr. Trump's name was mentioned at several points in the indictment and the evidence at hand appeared to show that as the former CEO of the company, the 45th President of the U.S. had signed some of the illegal compensation cheques in the 15-year tax fraud scheme. There are also indications that the indictment might be the tip of the iceberg in relation to the extent of the New York District Attorney's investigation of the corporate practices of Mr. Trump and the Trump Organization. In May 2021, legal filings in New York revealed that the office of the DA, Cyrus Vance, was arguing in court that Mr. Trump's accountants were required to produce eight years of his personal and corporate tax returns in compliance with a grand jury subpoena. This hinted that what was originally suspected to be an inquiry into illicit payments made by Mr. Trump's associates, prior to the 2016 presidential election, to two women who said they had affairs with Mr. Trump, had expanded into a far-reaching investigation relating to bank and insurance fraud.

While Mr. Trump has characteristically attacked the ongoing indictment and broader case as a "political Witch Hunt by the Radical Left Democrats," there is no escaping the reality that if the charges stick and the investigation continues to broaden its scope, he will be hobbled by a political distraction should he attempt a second presidential run in 2024. There have been troubling questions about his business activities ever since he entered office, including, given that his real estate holdings were used for U.S. government activities, whether he was in violation of the Emoluments Clause of the U.S. Constitution. The larger question, however, is the one facing the Republican Party as such: when the next presidential election rolls around, will it continue to place its faith in a man who despite claiming to be an outsider to Washington politics is evidently no different from any run-of-the-mill plutocrat or any networked member of corporate elite bent on maximising personal gain no matter the social cost? Should they do so for want of real leadership within their ranks, that would be a sad commentary on the state of and prospects for the conservative movement in the country.

A virus, theories of origin, and a place for science

Polarisation on political lines will only create more hurdles in finding clear answers to the source of SARS-CoV-2

THOMAS ABRAHAM

Imagine a town with a nuclear power plant close by. If its residents displayed signs of radiation sickness, the finger of suspicion will point towards the plant, however much the plant's operator might swear to its safety.

Mirroring a scenario

Suppose the town was also home to a research centre where radioactive material was stored and used in experiments. The finger of suspicion would now waver between the nuclear plant and the research centre. To complicate matters, if nuclear waste from both the plant and the research centre was buried in an underground dump a fair distance away from the town, a third focus of suspicion would arise.

Public opinion would be divided. Those suspicious of the nuclear power industry would be convinced that the plant was the source of their pollution. Little bits of circumstantial evidence would begin to circulate on social media as well as in the opinion columns of newspapers pointing to the power plant.

The nuclear industry would fight back and accuse the research institute of causing a radiation leak. The scientific establishment would close ranks around the research lab and testify to safety standards in the laboratory as well as the quality of the researchers.

A third group of people would probably accuse both the power plant as well as the research institute of poisoning the world by using and storing toxic nuclear waste.

Each of these groups would believe they had the truth and others were wrong. They would be critical of any investigation that did not agree with their beliefs.

Hypothesis and evidence

The debate over the origins of SARS-CoV-2, the virus that has caused the COVID-19 pandemic, mirrors this scenario. One school of thought is convinced that the Wuhan Institute of Virology, a leading coronavirus research centre, is responsible for introducing a new coronavirus that it was secretly creating in its laboratories.

This hypothesis is driven by evidence ranging from reports of documents missing from the website of the Wuhan Institute, to the renaming or re-numbering of a virus originally discovered in a mine in 2012 that is the closest known ancestor to SARS-CoV-2, to reports of researchers mysteriously falling ill at the Wuhan Institute in late 2019, and other reports of a researcher who has reportedly gone missing.

The fact that the outbreak occurred in Wuhan, home to the institute, is seen as additional evidence of where the virus emerged from. This hypothesis is greatly favoured by those who believe China is responsible for the pandemic, but lacks evidence that would stand up to rigorous scientific scrutiny.

The second hypothesis is that the virus emerged through a natural "spillover" event, where a bat coronavirus jumped species and infected humans either directly or through intermediary animals that in turn passed it to humans. SARS (severe acute respiratory syndrome), the predecessor of this current pandemic, started similarly in late 2002 when a bat coronavirus probably infected animals and then humans in the markets of Guangdong province in southern China. New viral infectious diseases, whether it is HIV/AIDS, Ebola, Middle East respiratory syndrome (MERS) or Nipah, have all arisen from spillovers of animal viruses to humans.

As with SARS, many of the early cases of COVID-19 were associated with animal markets, particularly the Huanan market in Wuhan, which sold a variety of live and frozen animal meat. This could be one route the SARS-CoV-2 virus took. But no evidence has been found so far to support this hypothesis either.

To find scientific proof of either hypothesis is a task as challenging as an archaeologist painstakingly digging through hundreds of metres of tightly packed layers of mud and stone and debris in the hope of recovering tiny clues to the existence of an ancient civilization.

For virologists and molecular epidemiologists, the challenge is not sifting through earth, but finding virus samples from the earliest stages of the outbreak in Wuhan, reconstructing their genetic sequences, and then fitting them to a family tree that will hopefully lead to the common ancestor of the diverse strains and variants of SARS-CoV-2 that have spread globally. This could also provide clues as to whether this ancestor emerged in wildlife, in farms and markets, or from a laboratory.

While this viral archaeology sounds simple, it is not straightforward. The earliest detected cases and the earliest viral samples came from those who were hospitalized in Wuhan in December 2019. But none of them is likely to have been patient zero, the first person to have been infected by the virus. Most people with COVID-19 display very mild or no symptoms, so for every hospitalized case, there are likely to have been many earlier cases that were not detected.

It is known that two strains, an A strain and a B strain, were circulating in Wuhan in the early stages of the outbreak. But most of the samples and cases were of the B strain, which caused the first recognised disease cluster in people associated with the Huanan market, while the A strain could have been an earlier strain. These earlier viral samples would have helped build a clearer picture of how the virus emerged. But these cases were never identified or sampled, and they will forever remain unknown.

The other source of evidence are samples from the live animals sold in all the markets in Wuhan in the last months of 2019; this too is also not available, since the animals have long been sold and slaughtered, and the markets more often than not sanitised. The samples that were collected in late December from the Huanan market did have the virus, but it is not clear whether the market was a source of the virus, or merely a place where it was amplified.

The entry of politics

So where does one go from here? The scientific unearthing and classification of viral samples in humans and animals to see where they lead is the only way ahead. But science is being elbowed aside by politics. Those who believe in a Chinese conspiracy are convinced that the truth will only come out after an investigation of the Wuhan laboratory and its staff by international investigators with a wide mandate to search the lab and question staff. This is not going to happen. China will no more allow this than India would allow international investigators to march through the National Institute of Virology in Pune or any other national laboratory in search of evidence of supposed wrongdoing.

Chinese cooperation crucial

The only solution is to work with China. The World Health Organization investigation into the origins of the virus, though rightly criticised for dismissing the laboratory leak theory with little explanation, did unearth evidence on the early stages of the pandemic and suggested a number of studies for the next phase. One important step would be widespread sampling of animals in farms across China that supplied the markets in Wuhan in the search of ancestor viruses to SARS-CoV-2. Workers in farms need to be tested as well for exposure to SARS-CoV-2 or related viruses.

Another suggested step is for blood banks across China to test blood samples from 2019 to see whether they carried antibodies for SARS-CoV-2. This could provide a clue to how early the virus was circulating in human populations. None of this can happen without Chinese cooperation.

For this to happen, polarisation on political lines needs to be put aside, and space needs to be created for science to do its work.

Gauging pandemic mortality with civil registration data

Underestimation is likely as the CRS is still an imperfect system, with potential sources of error

RUKMINI S.

Over the last month, Indian journalists from across the country have accessed and reported on State-level all-cause mortality from the Civil Registration System (CRS), currently confidential and closed to the public. While India's official death toll from COVID-19 has been suspect from the very beginning – for reasons that are partly institutional and partly new and specific to the pandemic – it was the second wave that made the scale of devastation hard to ignore.

States and data

Using the example set by those attempting to capture missed COVID-19 deaths in the United Kingdom, South Africa and Peru, journalists from a range of news organisations accessed all-cause mortality data from the CRS for Madhya Pradesh, Andhra Pradesh, Tamil Nadu, Bihar, parts of Uttar Pradesh, Kerala, and other States as well as for several Indian cities. This data has been able to show a large rise in excess mortality in the surge months of the second wave of April and May 2021 in particular, far in excess of the official COVID-19 toll for the same period. The increase in mortality ranges from reported deaths climbing to five times the usual monthly data in Madhya Pradesh and Andhra

Undeniable undercounting

Even with the most conservative estimates, there was significant excess mortality in 2021, far in excess of the official COVID-19 toll

States	Modelled estimate for 2021*	Reported deaths in 2021	Excess	Official COVID-19 toll
Madhya Pradesh	2,30,628	3,48,708	1,18,080	4,461
Andhra Pradesh	1,46,046	2,72,910	1,26,864	3,822
Tamil Nadu	2,05,327	3,18,425	13,098	12,110
Kerala	1,01,160	1,15,471	14,312	5,743

*Estimated deaths as of 2019 recalculated for five months
Note: Bihar is excluded from this analysis as its level of registration is only 51%

Pradesh (between 30-40 times the official COVID-19 toll for the same period), to more modest increases in Tamil Nadu and Kerala.

Sources of error

While this data has added an important dimension to the question of undercounting of COVID-19 deaths in India and remains the best source of data on all-cause mortality, its continued use will require careful work on account of some known sources of error that exist with the data.

The first is that these numbers are underestimates of total mortality. The Union government last published annual Civil Registration System data for 2019. This data shows that India registered 92 of every 100 deaths as of 2019, but there was large variation between States. Bihar, for instance, registered just half of all deaths. Additionally, the data currently available on State-level CRS portals (behind a login) miss even more deaths. The CRS moved online relatively recently (between five and three years ago in most States), and State-level portals now display data for every day from January 1, 2018 to the present day. For all States for which data is available except Kerala, the online portals show lower numbers than what was published by the Union government for 2018 and 2019. What this implies is that the data currently being used for analyses are an underestimate of total deaths, but should not by itself cause an inflation of the excess mortality estimates for the pandemic (since the online portal's data was used for past and current years).

What could, however, alter the magnitude of calculated excess mortality would be a second possible source of error – if mortality was either naturally increasing over time, or if registration was getting better, or if both were taking place. If any of these three phenomena were taking place, the magnitude of excess mortality in 2020 and 2021 could be moderated by the most conservative estimate, let us assume that Madhya Pradesh achieved 100% registration by May 2021 (although we know from State level data that this was far from the case). Given the flattening of mortality in the State, let us assume that the total mortality in 2021 in 'normal' times would have been about the same as the total estimated deaths for 2019 – 5.53 lakh deaths. Even then, the numbers for Madhya Pradesh show over 1.18 lakh excess deaths in 2021, which is over 26 times the official COVID-19 death toll for the same period. The other States too show excess mortality in 2021 even assuming full registration.

Moreover, single-month spikes in months like the one seen in May 2021 cannot be explained away by the gradual increase in registrations alone. Nor are these deaths that occurred months before. From Andhra Pradesh, for instance, we know that 98% of the deaths registered in May 2021 took place within the previous 30 days.

An imperfect resource Taken together, these potential sources of error indicate that while the total number of deaths in India during the pandemic reported using Civil Registration System data might be an underestimate, a part of the increase in mortality can be explained by improved registration. However, the scale of excess mortality during the second wave in particular is undeniable, especially compared to the low number of COVID-19 deaths officially recorded in the same period.

The Civil Registration System is an imperfect system, yet one that journalists are having to turn to in the face of the continuing refusal of the Union government to engage with the issue of the true extent of mortality. Acknowledging the gaps in the system will help journalists, but does not minimise the magnitude of the crisis.

Afghan's descent

Afghanistan seems to be, ominously, on the brink of a dreadful civil war (Page 1, "Taliban capture several districts in Afghanistan", July 5). What is appalling is that in the ensuing power struggle between the Afghan security forces and the Taliban, the extremist, war-happy Taliban seems to be gaining an upper hand. With the embers of militancy and extremism flaring up, the beleaguered Afghan government is naturally feeling let down by the United States and its allies. Apparently, the remedy of the U.S. and its allies for peace in Afghanistan is worse than the malady. Unfortunately for India, which has contributed immensely in rebuilding the war-torn nation, the rise of the anti-India Taliban bodes ill, especially when China has been making inroads into Afghanistan. However, the biggest lesson the Afghan imbroglio has is for the U.S. Be it its interference in Vietnam, Iraq or now Afghanistan, it seems to have received a bloody nose by playing the global policeman. It should now realise that maintaining global peace is the prerogative of the UN.

The Rafale deal
With the war of words between the Bharatiya Janata Party and the Congress getting uglier by the day over an investigation into the Rafale deal, citizens are not getting any wiser in the absence of any official response from the Government on the issue. The details of why the French agency is now reasonably satisfied about the need for a judicial investigation into the deal cannot be brushed aside. The Indian government can no longer be disingenuous about allegations of wrong-doing. The Opposition, and the Congress in particular, has been vociferous in its demand to have a joint parliamentary committee to probe various questionable aspects of the deal including pricing; and this cannot be ignored (Page 1, "Cong. calls for probe into Rafale deal", July 5).

■ There is still a lingering suspicion that the deal was not entirely free from the taint of kickbacks or the underhand payment of 'hidden commission'. Sometimes 'influence peddlers', 'money launderers' and 'middlemen' masquerade as 'facilitators' of the sale of defence equipment. And the Government, if it is really committed to ensuring transparency and accountability, cannot run away. There is a need for a credible investigation. Opacity still surrounds the role a leading Indian business group played and the gain it made using its political clout despite possessing no funds and

Crafting a unique partnership with Africa

The future of India-Africa cooperation is agriculture, even as the China factor looms large

VEDA VAIDYANATHAN

"A historical solidarity is today a modern partnership," tweeted External Affairs Minister S. Jaishankar during his recent trip to Kenya. Critical to its foreign policy matrix, New Delhi's engagement with the African continent has been multifaceted, with projects implemented under Indian lines of credit, capacity-building initiatives, and cooperation in a range of sectors. As an importer of fruits, nuts, grains and pulses from the continent, Indian congruence with African countries in the agriculture sector is expanding. With 65% of the world's uncultivated arable land, employing over 60% of the workforce, and accounting for almost 20% of Sub-Saharan Africa's GDP, agriculture is critical to Africa's economy. The African Continental Free Trade Area agreement is expected to improve cost competitiveness by removing tariffs. As this relationship enters the post-pandemic world, it is vital to prioritise and channel resources into augmenting partnership in agriculture. This is crucial given its unexplored potential, centrality to global food security, business prospects and to provide credible alternatives to the increasing involvement of Chinese stakeholders in the sector.

Analysing Chinese engagement

Over the past few years, I have led and worked with different teams of experts from various African countries, conducting evidence-based studies at the grassroots level to demystify Chinese engagement in the region. Evaluating the approaches that Chinese corporations, small and medium-sized enterprises and entrepreneurs adopt has provided a layered perspective of the sociopolitical, economic and environmental impact of Chinese engagement.

Today, China is among Africa's largest trading partners. It is also Africa's single biggest creditor. Its corporations dominate the region's infrastructure market and are now entering the agri-infra sector. Increasingly critical to China's global aspirations, its engagement in African agriculture is taking on a strategic quality. Therefore, dismissing Beijing's engagement in African agriculture as inconsequential for New Delhi would be unwise.

While access to Africa's natural resources, its untapped markets and support for 'One China Policy' are primary drivers of Chinese engagement with the region, there are other factors at play. Chinese-built industrial parks and economic zones in Africa are attracting low-cost, labour-intensive manufacturing units that are relocating from China. Chinese engineers interviewed spoke of how their operations in Africa are important to accumulate global experience in management, risk and capital investments. Not only are they willing to overlook short-term profits in order to build 'brand China', but they want to dominate the market in the long term, which includes pushing Chinese standards in host countries. Chinese tech companies are laying critical telecommunications infrastructure, venture capital funds are investing in African fintech firms, while other smaller enterprises are expanding across the region.

While many Chinese entities have been active in Africa's agricultural landscape for decades now, the nature, form and actors involved have undergone substantial change. In Zambia, Chinese firms are introducing agri-tech to combat traditional challenges, such as using drone technology to control the fall armyworm infestation. They have set up over 20 Agricultural Technology Demonstration Centers (ATDCs) in the continent where Chinese agronomists work on developing new crop varieties and increasing crop yields. These ATDCs partner with local universities, conduct workshops and classes for officials and provide training and lease equipment to small holder farmers. Chinese companies with no prior experience in agriculture are setting out to build futuristic ecological parks while others are purchasing large-scale commercial farms. Furthermore, African agriculture experts, officials and farmers are provided opportunities to augment skills and be trained in China.

The exponential growth in the China-Africa economic ties and the emergence of Beijing as an alternate to traditional western powers has motivated change in perceptions across groups. Governments and heads of state are recalibrating approaches, media houses are investing more resources for on-the-ground-reporting and artists like Michael Soi in Kenya are using satirical paintings to start a dialogue. Simultaneously, Africa-China relations are becoming complex with a growing, insular diaspora, lopsided trade, looming debt, competition with local businesses and a negative perception accompanied by greater political and socioeconomic interlinkages.

Examining Chinese interactions also provides cues on what not to do. The Chinese and African experts working in ATDCs seemingly operate in silos. On occasion, there seems to be a gap between skills transferred in China and the ground realities in Africa. In some cases, the technology taught in China is not available locally and in others, there is inability to implement lessons learnt due to the absence of supporting resources.

Larger commercial farms run by Mandarin-speaking managers and the presence of small-scale Chinese farmers in local markets aggravates socio-cultural stresses.

Takeaways for India

India-Africa agricultural cooperation currently includes institutional and individual capacity-building initiatives such as the India-Africa Institute of Agriculture and Rural development in Malawi, extension of soft loans, supply of machinery, acquisition of farmlands and the presence of Indian entrepreneurs in the African agricultural ecosystem. Indian farmers have purchased over 6,000,000 hectares of land for commercial farming in Africa. Sub-national actors are providing another model of cooperation in agriculture. Consider the case of the Kerala government trying to meet its steep requirement for raw cashew nuts amounting to 8 lakh tonnes a year with imports from countries in Africa to complement its production capacity currently limited to 0.83 lakh tonnes. There are also proposals to create a jointly-owned brand of Africa-Kollam cashews. Similar ideas could encourage State governments and civil society organisations to identify opportunities and invest directly.

There is also promise in incentivising Indian industries to tap into Africa's agri-business value chains and connecting Indian technology firms and startups with partners in Africa. The transformative power of innovative and disruptive technology has been evident in the African agri-tech sector as the startup ecosystem in the continent enjoyed a 110% growth between 2016 and 2018. In the past year, despite the pandemic, the sector witnessed a record increase in investments.

A thorough impact assessment needs to be conducted of the existing capacity-building initiatives in agriculture for India to stand in good stead. This could include detailed surveys of participants who have returned to their home countries. Country-specific and localised curriculum can be drawn up, making skill development demand-led.

While India's Africa strategy exists independently, it is important to be cognisant of China's increasing footprint in the region. Beijing's model, if successful here, could be heralded as a replica for the larger global south.

It is important to note, however, that prominent African voices have emphasised that their own agency is often overlooked in global discourse on the subject. In that sense India has consistently chosen well to underline the development partnership to be in line with African priorities. It is pertinent, therefore, that we collectively craft a unique modern partnership with Africa.

Will a national judiciary work?

In the current context, the feasibility of the All India Judicial Service requires to be studied

RAJNISH PATHIYIL

The Union government appears to be steadfast in its resolve to implement reforms in recruitment and appointment to the subordinate judicial services. In 2019, it spearheaded a consultative process for the creation of the All India Judicial Service (AIJS). Initially, only four States and two High Courts supported the proposal. Eight States rejected it, five suggested changes, and 11 are yet to respond. Recently, the Centre took the ordinance route to effect changes in the appointment of members to various tribunals. In a single stroke, it abolished several tribunals. The manner of appointment of members to the remaining tribunals underwent a sea change. It is likely that the ordinance may not pass judicial scrutiny in light of the Supreme Court's judgment in Royer Mathew v. South Indian Bank (2019).

Constitutional perspective

Article 233(i) of the Constitution lays down that "appointments of persons to be, and the posting and promotion of, district judges in any State shall be made by the Governor of the State in consultation with the High Court exercising jurisdiction in relation to such State". The 42nd Constitutional amendment in 1976 amended Article 312 (i) empowering Parliament to make laws for the creation of one or more All-India Services, including an AIJS, common to the Union and the States. However, Clause 3 of Article 312 places a restriction that such a service shall not include a post inferior to that of a district judge. The amendment also brought about a significant change in the Seventh Schedule – Entry 3 of List II in its entirety was placed as Entry IIA in List III.

This paves the way for Parliament to enact laws with regard to 'Administration of Justice; constitution and organisation of all courts, except the Supreme Court and the High Courts'. Post-Emergency, amendment to Article 312 (i) has escaped parliamentary scrutiny. A dichotomy exists with regard to Articles 233 and 312. What was essentially intended to be the prerogative of the State will now be the prerogative of the Union. If the fundamental power of the States to make such rules and govern the appointment of district judges is taken away, it may be against the principle of federalism and the basic structure doctrine.

The First Law Commission deliberated upon this, but it was only in 1972 that the issue gained momentum. The views of the Chief Justice of India and the Law Commission reports perhaps paved the way to bring in the 42nd constitutional amendment. It was only in 1986 that the Law Commission resurrected the issue and deliberated upon the objections. The primary fear was that promotional avenues of the subordinate judiciary would be severely curtailed. Fifty per cent of the posts of district judges are to be filled by promotion from the subordinate judicial service, thus leaving open the remaining for direct recruitment. Another fundamental concern was the language barrier.

The Union Law Minister has extolled AIJS to be an ideal solution for equal representation of the marginalised and deprived sections of society. Most States already have a reservation policy in force. Tamil Nadu provides for a roster-based reservation of 69%, of which 30% is for women. Uttar Pradesh merely provides 20% reservation for women and the AIJS may therefore benefit States like U.P. Arguments that the AIJS will reduce judicial delays do not hold water as the subordinate courts are the crucial point of delays owing to the existence of large vacancies.

In the early 1960s, the issue was debated during the Chief Justice Conference and was favoured by the eminent body, but many States and High Courts opposed it. The First National Judicial Pay Commission found that it would be in the interest and the health of the judiciary to form an AIJS. The report supported and reiterated the recommendations of the 14th Law Commission.

In the All-India Judges case in 1992 the apex court had opined that the recommendations of the Law Commission should be examined and implemented. The issue was again discussed in All India Judges Association vs. Union of India (2002). The court accepted most recommendations of the Shetty Commission and directed the government to implement the judgment.

Any groundbreaking reform is bound to receive criticism. The National Commission constituted for review of the Constitution headed by luminaries including Justice H.R. Khanna, Justice B.P. Jeevan Reddy and K. Parasaran, the then Attorney General, had suggested a paradigm shift in the approach of the Union. The feasibility of the AIJS in the current context requires to be studied, especially when reliance is placed upon archaic reports of the Law Commission. It is for the Union to dispel doubts and at the same time give wings to the aspirations of all stakeholders when implementing the proposal. It, however, remains to be seen if the AIJS would be like the proverbial curate's egg.

Inadequate promises for Punjab

Kejriwal may have over-estimated the ability of doles to see the AAP through in the 2022 elections

TRIDIVESH SINGH MAINI

During his visit to Punjab on June 29, Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal announced that if the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) is voted to power in the 2022 Assembly elections, it would provide 300 units free electricity for each family and waive previous power bills. He did clarify that while the promise of providing 24-hour electricity would take time, waiver on power bills would be immediate.

Days earlier, he had also said that AAP would project a Sikh as the chief ministerial face of his party. Not projecting a local Punjabi face was cited as one of the reasons for the party being unable to form the government in 2017, in spite of a groundswell of support.

While projecting a local face is imperative, Mr. Kejriwal may have over-estimated the ability of doles to see the AAP through in the 2022 elections. While populism has worked in the past, there are other issues which need to be addressed.

Issues that need to be addressed
First, while many people look at the Delhi AAP government's focus on health and education with interest, there is clear understanding that there are significant differences between Punjab and Delhi in terms of the economic landscape.

Second, there is a growing clamour for a government which gives primacy to the State's long-term interests. Over the past two decades, when it was in an alliance with the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP), the Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) had kept mum on important issues related to Centre-State relations. There has thus been a clear void as far as effective articulation of Punjab's regional aspirations and a number of Sikh issues is concerned. The Chief Minister, Captain Amarinder Singh, in spite of his proximity to the Congress high command, was perceived to be vocal in safeguarding the State's interests. His triumph in 2017 can be attributed to the same, though in his current tenure he has failed to live up to that reputation.

It is true that after breaking its alliance with the BJP after the passage of three farm bills, SAD has been making the right noises on issues pertaining to federalism and also attempted to find common cause with other regional parties. But a large section of what comprised its core support base is still disenchanted due to the incidents of sacrifice of the Guru Granth Sahib and the killing of peaceful protesters during the tenure of the SAD government. While SAD has allied with the Bahujan Samaj Party (BSP) for the upcoming Assembly elections, there are murmurs that it could return to the BJP.

Making inroads into Punjab
If one were to look at the AAP, there is some interest in its governance model in Punjab. But there are concerns about its sidetracking of local leaders during the earlier election and its ambiguity on issues concerning Punjab, specifically on the river water issue. Apart from this, the high command culture of the party, like in other national parties, is not likely to go down well with voters.

Third, from a political standpoint, the AAP has little support in the Malwa region, but no support in Doaba or Majha. It may be able to make some inroads into these regions if it ties up with a breakaway group of the SAD, the SAD (Sanyukt). Also, if the AAP can draw a sizeable chunk of urban votes, which generally go to the BJP or Congress, it could be in a pole position. Finally, there is a growing awareness about the pitfalls of populism. While there has been opposition to the farm laws, the detrimental impact of the current wheat-paddy cycle which has caused the water levels to drop and impacted the environment has not gone unnoticed.

Punjab's political landscape is witnessing an interesting churn. There is a general consensus that a futuristic vision for Punjab which gives precedence to the State's interests is imperative. Unlike West Bengal and Tamil Nadu, the regional party of the State which is best placed to do that, the SAD, has failed in recent decades.

Short stints at the top

Just 114 days after taking charge as the Chief Minister of Uttarakhand, Tirath Singh Rawat resigned on July 2, as the six-month deadline for him to get elected to the Assembly was fast approaching. Due to the pandemic, the Election Commission has not yet decided to hold by-elections to various Rajya Sabha and Assembly seats vacant across the country. In at least 44 instances, Chief Ministers held the office for less than 114 days, an analysis of those who came to power between 1962 and 2021 across 20 States, shows. Details on West Pakistanis India is prepared to consider Pakistan's request for information on West Pakistanis who have taken shelter in India from East Bengal "on humanitarian grounds" if Pakistan will also act according to the norms of international law and procedure in regard to more than 250 Indians languishing in Pakistani jails, official sources said to-day [New Delhi, July 5]. The sources were commenting on the Pakistani Foreign Office statement on Friday alleging that India was holding back several Pakistani Government officials, businessmen and tea-estate owners who had sought shelter in India during the "disturbances in East Pakistan". The Pakistani newspapers, television and radio had played up this allegation and Mr. Aftab Ahmed Khan, Director-General in the Pakistani Foreign Office, had also spoken about this to India's acting High Commissioner in Islamabad. The Pakistani press had also reported that the Pakistani Government had approached the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, Prince Sadruddin Aga Khan, and "friendly governments to arrange relief and repatriation of the "East Pakistani nationals".

How to boycott foreign goods

Mr. M.K. Gandhi writes in the "Bombay Chronicle": It is needless to say at this time of the day that the proposed boycott of foreign cloth is not a vindictive process, but is as necessary for national existence as breath is to life. The quicker therefore it can be brought about the better for the country. Without it Swaraj cannot be established or retained after establishment. It is of the highest importance to know how it can be brought about even before the 1st day of August next. To arrive at the boycott quickly, it is necessary for (1) the mill-owners to regularise their profits and to manufacture principally for the Indian market; (2) for importers to cease to buy foreign goods. A beginning has already been made by three principal merchants; (3) for the consumers to refuse to buy any foreign cloth and to buy Khadi wherever possible; (4) for the consumers to wear only Khadi cloth, mill cloth being retained for the poor who do not know the distinction between Swadeshi and Pardesi; (5) for the consumers to use, till Swaraj is established, Khadi just enough for covering the body...

Political leaders call for accountability

General secretary of the Communist Party of India D. Raja said Fr. Swamy's death was an institutional murder. "Both the State machinery and the judiciary are responsible for his death. The State was not ready to give him even a straw... The judiciary's conduct is also questionable. On what grounds did they deny bail to a 84-year-old person who was suffering from multiple illness."

Kavita Krishnan, member of the Communist Party of India (Marxist-Leninist) politburo, hit out at the Central government as well as the judiciary over Fr. Swamy's death. "Modi & Shah have accomplished the custodial killing of the gentle Jesuit social worker Fr Stan Swamy," who spent his life serving the oppressed. I hope the judges who denied him bail never get to sleep at night: they have blood on their hands," she said in a tweet.

CPI (Marxist) general secretary Sitaram Yechury said he was "deeply pained and outraged" at the death of Fr. Stan. "...A Jesuit priest & social activist he tirelessly helped the marginalised. Draconian UAPA custody, inhuman treatment since October 2020 with no charge established," he said in a tweet.

Dr. Stanislaus D'Souza S.J. of the Jesuit Provincial of India, said: "I express my deepest condolences to the family members, friends, lawyers, well-wishers and all those who stood by Stan."

CBSE to cut syllabus, hold board exams in Nov., April

Schools must create a student profile for all assessment undertaken over the year and retain the evidence in digital format, with marks uploaded onto CBSE's IT platform, said the notification.

The CBSE has made provisions for different assessment scenarios depending on the pandemic situation.

If both term exams are held, the final theory marks will be equally split between the two. If the pandemic forces complete school closures in November and December, the first term exams will be conducted online or in homes, and would carry reduced weightage in the final results.

But Justice Nariman agreed with Mr. Parikh that the "state of affairs is shocking". He said the court had to intervene and work out a mechanism to disseminate the Shreya Singhal judgment to every police station and trial court in the country.

Twitter failed to comply with IT Rules: Centre

In India, Section 79 of the IT Act shields social media platforms or intermediaries such as Twitter from liability for any third party information, data, or communication link made available or hosted by it in certain cases.

The Ministry said when an intermediary fails to observe the IT Rules, the intermediary could be liable for any punishment under any law for the time being in force in respect of the offending content.

The Ministry stated that the immunity conferred on intermediaries is a "conditional immunity" subject to the intermediary satisfying the various conditions.

"The IT Rules, 2021 are the law of the land and Respondent No. 2 (Twitter) is mandatorily required to comply with the same," it added.

The Ministry's affidavit came in response to a petition by advocate Amit Acharya, seeking to appoint a Resident Grievance Officer under Rule 4 of the Information Technology (Intermediary Guidelines and Digital Ethics Code) Rules 2021.

12 MLAs suspended for a year from Maharashtra Assembly

BJP MLAs were 'abusing' the presiding officer

STAFF REPORTER
MUMBAI

Twelve BJP MLAs have been suspended from the Maharashtra Assembly for one year for "abusing" and "misbehaving" with the presiding officer in chair, both inside and outside the Assembly. The Assembly also passed two resolutions asking the Union government to intervene in the issue of reservation to Other Backward Classes (OBCs) and the Maratha community.

Parliamentary Affairs Minister Anil Parab presented a resolution to suspend the MLAs and the House passed it on a majority vote. The BJP, while boycotting the House, termed it an act to suppress its voice and an attempt to bring down the number of the Opposition.

The ruckus inside the Assembly took place as the tripartite Maha Vikas Aghadi (MVA) government brought a resolution seeking empirical data on OBCs from the Union government.

Leader of the Opposition Devendra Fadnavis raised a point of objection before senior Minister Chhagan Bhujbal presented the resolution, claiming that the State government did not follow the Supreme Court's directions for 15 months.

After allowing Mr. Fadnavis to speak, Shiv Sena MLA Bhaskar Jadhav, who was the presiding officer in the Speakers' chair, directed Mr. Bhujbal to read out the reply and present the resolution.

After allowing Mr. Fadnavis to speak, Shiv Sena MLA Bhaskar Jadhav, who was the presiding officer in the Speakers' chair, directed Mr. Bhujbal to read out the reply and present the resolution. As he denied Mr. Fadnavis an opportunity to reply to Mr. Bhujbal, agitated BJP MLAs rushed in front of his chair and smacked the mike.

They also tried to lift the sceptre in front of the Speaker's chair.

The House was adjourned for 10 minutes after the resolution was passed. It was then adjourned three times for 15 minutes and once for 30 minutes.

The Assembly and Council also passed a resolution to ease the 50% limit on reservation to ensure Socially and Economically Backward Class (SEBC) be given reservation benefits.

'My regime was not jungle raj, it was rule of the poor'

Lalu addresses workers virtually on RJD's foundation day

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
PATNA

For the first time after over three-and-a-half years of incarceration, ailing Rashtriya Janata Dal (RJD) chief Lalu Prasad inaugurated the party's 25th foundation day virtually from Delhi on Monday, and asserted that "his regime was not jungle raj, as is being projected by political rivals".

In his nearly 30-minute address to party workers and leaders, a frail Mr. Prasad regretted that he was unable to be physically present among them because of his ill health.

"My regime was not jungle raj, as is projected by rivals. It was the rule of the poor. During the last Lok Sabha and Assembly elections, I wanted to come out of jail, but could not," he said as workers and party leaders, including Tejashwi Yadav and Tej Pratap Yadav (his sons), watched him on a large screen at the party headquarters in Patna.

He hailed the party workers and commended both his sons for their oratory skills. "I want to assure the people that we're not going to step back and will not be cowed down by the pressure and conspiracies of our political rivals. Tejashwi should not be discouraged, as the future of RJD is very bright and we'll take the country ahead," Mr. Prasad said.

Out on bail

The ailing RJD chief, who was convicted in several fodder scam cases, came out on bail recently and has been recuperating at the residence of his elder daughter and party Rajya Sabha member, Misa Bharti, in New Delhi. He was sent to the Ranchi Central Jail, but served most of his sentence at a government hospital in Ranchi for multiple ailments. Recently, he was shifted to the All India Institute of Medical Sciences (AIIMS) in New Delhi.

"If Tejashwi and Rabri Devi [his wife] had not taken me to AIIMS in Delhi, I would have died in Ranchi. But I'll come to Patna soon and tour the State to meet everyone," he said.

Regular training'

He said farmers, youth and students associated with the party should undergo "regular training". "People believe that only the RJD can end the current problems."

He accused the Nitish Kumar government in Bihar of corruption and mismanagement of the COVID-19 crisis. "Every day, at least four murders take place in Bihar. Lakhs of people have been rendered jobless and reduced to being migrant labourers," Mr. Prasad said.

Hitting out at the BJP government at the Centre, Mr. Prasad said, "Inflation and unemployment has broken the backs of the people. After GST and demonetisation, there is an economic crisis in the country and there is an attempt to create a rift in the social fabric. After Ayodhya, some people are talking about Mathura. For power, they are ruining the country."

West Bengal Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee on Monday said she was shocked that the retail prices of petrol had crossed ₹100 a litre across many States

In a letter to Prime Minister Narendra Modi, she urged him to substantially reduce the taxes charged by the Central government on petrol and diesel. "It is my earnest request that the taxes charged by the Central government on petrol and diesel be substantially reduced to give much-needed relief to the common people and also to check the overall inflationary trend in the country today," she wrote.

In the two-page communication, Ms. Banerjee pointed out that the petrol and diesel prices had been hiked eight times since May 4. Out of these, prices were hiked six times in June and four times in one week.

She said the Central government had collected a "staggering" revenue of ₹3,71,725 crore from oil and petroleum products in the financial year 2020-21, in the midst of the pandemic.

Shiromani Akali Dal (SAD) president Sukhbir Singh Badal on Monday asked the Congress government in Punjab to provide affordable electricity to people round the clock instead of politicising the issue of fixed power paid to all thermal plants to cover up its mismanagement surrounding the sector. Mr. Badal said the issue of fixed charges was being politicised by both the Congress and the Aam Aadmi Party (AAP) even though they were aware that this charge was applicable to private and government thermal plants as well as power purchased from outside the State.

Shakti Bhog Foods' CMD arrested on graft charge

NEW DELHI
The Enforcement Directorate (ED) has arrested the chairman-cum-managing director (CMD) of Shakti Bhog Foods Limited, Kewal Krishan Kumar, on money laundering charges in connection with a bank fraud case involving ₹3,269.42 crore. It also conducted searches at nine locations in Delhi and Haryana. "He was produced before a special court that sent him to ED custody till July 9," said an official. The ED probe is based on an FIR registered by the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) on December 31 last year, against the company and its directors.

AHMEDABAD
More than 50 rounds of tear gas shells were fired by police when protests by hundreds of local tribal people turned violent during a public hearing of a smelter project being set up by Hindustan Zinc Ltd., an arm of the Vendata group, in Tapi district, Gujarat, on Monday. The Gujarat State Pollution Control Board had fixed July 5 for a public hearing on the proposed plant. The local tribal people, under the banner of Adivasi Panch, have been contending that they would lose their livelihood, and lead, cadmium, arsenic and sulphur dioxide from the factory would pose a great threat to public health.

Low Aadhaar seeding delaying 'One Nation One Ration Card' in Assam: govt.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Delhi and West Bengal are expected to roll out the 'One Nation One Ration Card' (ONORC) scheme by the end of the month, while Chhattisgarh is still in the process of acquiring the necessary devices, according to Food Secretary Sudhanshu Pandey.

However, the low penetration of Aadhaar in Assam due to concerns linked to the National Population Register (NPR) is hampering the implementation of ONORC there, he told presspersons on Monday.

"In Assam, the basic reason is that the Aadhaar penetration is still low and we are working with UIDAI on that. As Aadhaar seeding improves, then Assam should also follow. We are pushing hard," he said. "There are issues related to the National Population Register, so Aadhaar seeding [of ration cards] itself is only 36-38% in comparison to the national rate of 92%," he said.

However, he declined to elaborate on how Aadhaar for ration purposes is linked to the NPR, or the National Register of Citizens (NRC).

The Centre is engaged in political battles with the non-BJP governments in Delhi and West Bengal regarding their failure to roll out ONORC, but has taken a different tack so far on Assam, Father Stanislaus LourduSwamy, who was popularly known as Father Stan Swamy, was born in Tiruchirappalli in the then Madras Presidency on April 26, 1937. He had been a priest for 51 years and fought tirelessly for jal (water), jungle (forest) and zameen (land) for the tribal people.

Father Swamy, who passed away at 1.24 p.m. on Monday, was arrested on October 8, 2020, by the National Investigation Agency from Bagachia in Ranchi, where he lived.

Father Tony, who lived with Father Swamy at Bagachia for several years, said, "His life was very inspiring to me personally. He always stood up for those who were denied justice, especially the Adivasis. He was moved by how they were denied the fundamental rights and always tried to work for them. He always stood up for those displaced and constantly wrote about their rights. It

Advocate Peter Martin, who filed the public interest litigation petition on behalf of Father Swamy before the Jharkhand High Court, said, "The irony is that he was so engaged in the work for the under-trial people implicated in false cases and he died as an under-trial."

Activist Siraj Datta, who worked with him on several issues for close to a decade, said, "He was a wonderful human being. He was extremely committed to working for the voiceless people and helped them get their due."

N. Ram, former Editor-in-Chief of The Hindu and Director, THG Publishing Private Ltd.; former Supreme Court Judge Justice Madan Lokur, and writer Nayantara Sahgal spoke at an online condolence meeting for Father Swamy.

Mr. Ram also spoke about co-accused Sudha Bharadwaj in the case.

"Let us not forget Sudha Bharadwaj, who has been languishing in Byculla jail for two-and-a-half years. This just shows a very poor commentary on courts for not acting in time. The way institutions are being manipulated to obey the diktats coming from above. We have to bring more solidarity in our polity," he said.

Mr. Lokur observed, "I am disappointed with the courts and prosecution in this case. This is 'inhuman'."

While in prison, Father Swamy had said, "We will still sing in chorus. A caged bird can still sing."

Union Cabinet likely to be expanded this week

24 slots vacant, with Ministers holding multiple portfolios

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The long-anticipated reshuffle and expansion of the Union Cabinet is likely to take place this week, according to highly placed sources.

The expansion, with 24 slots to fill and multiple Ministries held by single Ministers to be decoupled, has been talked about for a while now. The possibility of it happening either on July 7 or 9 is now being talked about with more certainty.

Several shoo-ins in the Union Cabinet, including a leader from north-central India who is owed a ministerial berth as a political quid pro quo and a leader from eastern India, have cancelled their travel plans and have been asked to be in Delhi on those dates.

Party appointments
Sources in the BJP said the Cabinet expansion will also affect the organisational appointments in the party as a senior general secretary of the BJP is expected to get a Cabinet berth.

Jyotiraditya Scindia is likely to be included.

Government sources were largely mum but did say that the inductions would take into account the needs of the States going to the polls next year, including Uttar Pradesh, from where Anupriya Patel of NDA ally Apna Dal is likely to be inducted. "Multiple Ministries are currently being handled by one Minister or other – there are four such clusters of Ministries that need to be redistributed and the Cabinet reshuffle exercise is likely to address that issue," said a source.

Formula likely to end tussle with Sidhu

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Amid the ongoing political turmoil in Punjab, Chief Minister Amarinder Singh is likely to meet Congress president Sonia Gandhi on Tuesday to give a final shape to a compromise formula to end the bitter factionalism.

The party had announced that by the first week of July, it hoped to put the infighting behind it.

For the past several weeks now, the State has witnessed a very public feud between the Chief Minister and cricketer-turned-politician Navjot Singh Sidhu. Last week, Mr. Sidhu had an hour-long meeting with former party chief Rahul Gandhi and general secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra where his role in the Punjab Congress is said to have been discussed.

Prior to that, Mr. Sidhu and Captain Amarinder had separately met the three-member All India Congress Committee (AICC) that had been set up to resolve the issue.

The AICC panel – comprising Leader of the Opposition in Rajya Sabha Mallikaran Kharge, general secretary (Punjab) Harish Rawat and J.P. Aggarwal – is learnt to have recommended that Mr. Sidhu needs to be suitably accommodated apart from suggesting a 18-point programme. While the Chief Minister has been open to suggestions on cracking down on sand and transport mafia, improving the power situation and visible action in the 2015 sacrilegious issue, he is opposed to making Mr. Sidhu the Pradesh Congress Committee president.

The Chief Minister wants the PCC to be headed by someone from the Hindu community and not a Jat Sikh since the government is headed by one.

It has sought suggestions before redrawing the boundaries of seven new constituencies.

CoWin made open source: PM

The tech-enabled platform will be available as a free public good to all countries

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The CoWin platform is being made open source and it will be available to all countries, Prime Minister Narendra Modi said at the CoWin Global Conclave here on Monday.

He said that with nearly 200 million users, the Aarogya Setu app was a readily available package for developers.

"There is no parallel to such a pandemic in hundred years and no nation, however powerful, can solve a challenge like this in isolation," Mr. Modi said, and added that all had to work together.

"Guided by the approach of 'One Earth, One Health', humanity will certainly overcome this pandemic," he said.

Trustworthy proof
Stating that India has adopted a completely digital approach while planning its vaccination strategy, the Prime Minister said a secure and trustworthy proof helped people establish when, where and by whom they had been vaccinated.

"Digital approach also helps in tracking the usage of vaccination and minimises wastage," he said.

"Furthermore, vaccinated people do not need to carry around fragile pieces of paper to prove anything. It is all available in digital format," the Prime Minister said. He also highlighted the customisability of the software to the local requirements of the countries interested in it.

Speaking about the CoWIN Global Outreach Programme, R.S. Sharma, CEO of the National Health Authority, said India endeavoured to share this tech-enabled vaccination platform as a free public good with the world.

"It is a known fact that nations across the world are endeavouring for universal vaccination amidst the steepest timelines," said Dr. Sharma, adding that "it's clear that as we thrive in the age of digital in the 21st century, we can't rely on methodologies from a century ago of achieving herd immunity by letting a pandemic leave the society devastated, like the Spanish Flu did."

"Persistent immunisation is going to be, by far, the most effective means to keep our people safe, globally," he said. Dr. Sharma said that CoWIN has become the fastest tech platform in the world to amass over 200 million registrations in a record four months, and then 300 million registrations in a mere five months.

Cities along rivers urged to include conservation plans

Policy document from Clean Ganga mission sets out norms

JACOB KOSHY
NEW DELHI

Cities situated on river banks will have to incorporate river conservation plans when they prepare their Master Plans, says a policy document from the National Mission for Clean Ganga.

The guide document, while spelling out provisions in the National Water Policy that emphasise the need for such plans, also says that these "river-sensitive" plans must be practical and consider questions of encroachment and land ownership.

"There is a need for a systematic rehabilitation plan for such encroaching entities that emphasises on alternative livelihood options in addition to a relocation strategy. Planners should make every attempt to engage with such entities during the preparation of the Master Plan in order to develop empathetic and humane solutions," the document notes.

The recommendations are currently for towns that are on the main stem of the maximum permissible heights of buildings. "Asserting the land ownership in these areas is, therefore, important to avoid legal complications while the Plan is being implemented," says the document.

The Master Plan should not mandate specific technologies, but it can "create an environment" for facilitating the use of state-of-the-art technologies for river management. These include satellite-based monitoring of water quality; artificial intelligence for riverine biodiversity mapping; big data and citizen science for river health monitoring; and unmanned aerial vehicles for floodplain mapping. These were being used across the world successfully.

Cities with an ongoing Master Plan tenure ought to be conducting an "immediate analysis" of the extent to which these river guidelines could have been adopted and this "will help" in incorporating the appropriate revisions when the current plan is reviewed.

Survey of Class 3 students to set baseline for literacy goals

Mission calls for use of mother tongue in early education

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Centre's NIPUN Bharat Mission has set a goal that by 2026-27, every Class 3 child should be able to read with understanding at the rate of at least 60 words per minute, be able to read and write numbers up to 9,999 and solve simple multiplication problems.

For this purpose, ₹2,688 crore has been set aside under the existing Samagra Shiksha scheme for 2021-22, said Education Minister Ramesh Pokhrayan Nishank at the launch of the mission on Monday.

A National Achievement Survey of Class 3 students to be conducted this November will set a baseline to track future progress. "Until grade 3, children are expected to 'learn to read' and acquire basic skills. After grade 3 children are expected to be able to 'read to learn'. If this does not happen, the learning gap continues to widen from that point, as the texts in the language textbooks and mathematical concepts become more complex and abstract in later grades," said the NIPUN Bharat guidelines. "Thus, grade 3 is the inflection point and this is where children who have not made it, get left behind."

comprehension, a child of 8 or 9 years should be able to write grammatically correct sentences, and converse with clarity using suitable vocabulary in the home or school languages. Together with simple number problems and the ability to identify shapes, time and date, fractions, and measurements in real-life situations, these goals are collectively being called the foundational literacy and numeracy skills every child should possess.

Stage-wise targets
Similar stage-wise targets are being set in a continuum from the pre-primary or balvati classes. The NIPUN Bharat strategy includes changes in curriculum and teaching methods to include more activity, art and storytelling, creation of print-rich materials and resources, teacher training, and stress-free assessment methods in order to reach these goals.

NIPUN Bharat also emphasises the importance of using a child's mother tongue in teaching, a principle of the National Education Policy 2020, which received some criticism. "The mother tongue of the child must be the language of communication [if not the medium of instruction] with the child in school in the formative years, so that the child does not suffer any confusion in understanding the transactions and is able to grow with free expression," said the guidelines.

It noted that most children, given sufficient instruction, can learn to read in their own home language within 4-6 months if there is oral comprehension.

Delhi Police directed to ensure safety of woman

NEW DELHI

The Delhi High Court on Monday extended the interim direction to the Delhi Police to ensure the safety of a woman from Shahjahanpur in Uttar Pradesh, who had converted from Hinduism to Islam on her own accord, till July 22. The next hearing has been scheduled for that day.

Justice Rekha Palli said she could not pass any direction in relation to the case without first hearing the Uttar Pradesh police.

As no counsel for the police was present during the videoconferencing hearing, Justice Palli ordered that a copy of the woman's petition be served to standing counsel of Uttar Pradesh in the Supreme Court.

"Before any orders are passed, against Respondents 4 [U.P. police] and 5 [U.P. government], which is situated beyond the territorial jurisdiction of this court, it is deemed appropriate to hear Respondents 4 and 5," the High Court said.

On July 1, the court directed the Delhi Police to take adequate steps to protect the life and safety of the 29-year-old woman, she said.

Renu Gangwar, in her petition, said she converted from Hinduism to Islam on May 27 of her "own free will and without any threat or coercion from anyone". Following this, she changed her name to Ayesha Alvi, which was published in newspapers.

Ms. Alvi, who is a resident of Tilhar, Shahjahanpur, and working in Delhi, allegedly started getting calls from different reporters requesting a meeting.

However, even after her refusal, a reporter allegedly came to her place in Tilhar and took photographs and videos without her permission, she said.

Gomti project: CBI searches 40 locations

The CBI on Monday searched over 40 locations in Uttar Pradesh, Rajasthan and West Bengal in a corruption case against 17 officials of Uttar Pradesh Irrigation Department and 172 others, including companies and their owners, for alleged irregularities in the execution of the Gomti River Front Project during 2014-17.

Samajwadi Party chief Akhilesh Yadav was the + Chief Minister when the project was implemented.

The accused in the ranks of junior assistant, principal assistant, assistant engineer, executive engineer, superintending engineer and chief engineer had employed three methods to indulge in corruption.

In many cases, the notices inviting tenders were not published in newspapers as required.

Tenders were awarded by officials on the recommendation of tender committees headed by themselves.

To establish that procedures were followed in awarding the tenders to the lowest bidders, forged documents were submitted to show some companies as competitive bidders. The FIR is an offshoot of a preliminary inquiry instituted on November 30, 2017.

SC describes plea on 'toolkit' as frivolous

LEGAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Supreme Court on Monday reminded a person who took offence to a "Congress toolkit" that India is a democracy where he can choose to ignore something he does not like or agree with.

The petitioner, Shashank Shekhar Jha, wanted a National Investigation Agency

probe into the toolkit which allegedly dealt with the government's handling of COVID. Mr. Jha said the Congress party's registration should be suspended if the "anti-national acts" were proved.

A Bench of Justices D.Y.

Chandrabhushan and M.R. Shah found the petition frivolous.

"Mr. Jha, if you don't like the toolkit, you can ignore the toolkit," Justice Chandrabhushan advised the petitioner.

Justice Chandrabhushan said parties engage in political propaganda, and it was left to each individual to engage with or ignore them.

Mr. Jha, however, referred to how Singapore had objected to "propaganda".

"Oh... India is a democra-cacy, you know," Justice Chandrabhushan replied.

Mr. Jha had even suggested a preliminary inquiry into the toolkit to see if any offences under sedition law or the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act were made out.

"The time of the Supreme Court is taken up by such frivolous petitions," Justice Chandrabhushan said.

The court allowed the petitioner to withdraw his petition.

Avoid attachment

Many philosophical and psychological insights pertinent to an individual's worldly existence can be drawn from the skillful depiction of the Jambabhara episode by Vyasa in the Bhagavata Purana, pointed out Sri R. Krishnamurthy Sastrigal in a discourse. King Bharata had been a righteous ruler and duly fulfilled all the duties devolved on him. At one stage in his life, he gave up all this and chose to lead an austere life in the Himalayas to seek liberation. His life as a hermit is described as exemplary in the Bhagavata Purana. Yet, he slipped from his aim of salvation at the end of his life owing to the attachment and concern he developed towards a motherless young deer. He began to believe that the deer too endeared itself to him and derived much comfort from this thought.

Once, when the deer was missing, he became greatly agitated and worried. His mind imagined all the likely dangers that the deer might have met with. The more he thought of all these, the more he longed for its presence as he believed that it will be safe only in the ashram. He would ruminate thus: Will the deer come back before the sun sets and sit on my lap once again and remove my distress? He even forgot himself to him and derived much comfort from this thought.

Sastras advocate practice of compassion as a virtue and also warn against show of dvesha towards any object or being. But when concern turns into possessiveness, it ties one to samsara. Rama worried about all the sufferings that Sita would be undergoing and was inconsolable. Lakshmana tried to calm Him by pointing out that all human contacts and relationships are very temporary and one should accept that parting from all these is inevitable. It is attachment that makes separation unbearable.

Over 1,000 Afghan troops flee to Tajikistan

With supply lines strained, Afghan forces have been crumbling in the face of the Taliban onslaught

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

KABUL

More than 1,000 Afghan troops fled into neighbouring Tajikistan on Monday following clashes with the Taliban, as the insurgents amassed momentum on the battlefield.

The exodus of troops followed another weekend of fighting across much of the northern countryside where the Taliban have overrun dozens of districts, spurring fears that Afghan forces are in crisis.

"They did not want to surrender. They had asked for reinforcements but their call was ignored," said Abdul Basir, a soldier based with a battalion in Badakhshan province that had members flee over the border.

The U.S. announced on Friday that it had handed over Bagram Air Base – the centre of its operations – to Afghan security forces, effectively wrapping up operations in the country following nearly two decades of fighting.

curity committee said 1,037 Afghan government troops had fled into the ex-Soviet country "to save their lives" after clashes with the Taliban during the night.

Counter-attack

"Taking into account the principle of good neighbourliness and adhering to the position of non-interference in the internal affairs of Afghanistan, the military personnel of the Afghan government forces were allowed to enter Tajik territory," said the statement, published by Tajikistan's state information agency.

Afghan troops had already crossed into Tajikistan following earlier clashes that saw the Taliban take control of a major border crossing between the countries.

The Afghan government has vowed to launch a counteroffensive in the north.

Hamdullah Mohib, the country's National Security Advisor, told Russia's RIA

news agency that an operation was "absolutely" in the works. Already thinly stretched with supply lines strained, Afghan security forces have been crumbling in the face of the Taliban onslaught, with several bases and outposts surrendering to the insurgents without firing a shot. "Afghan forces have lost their morale," said analyst Atta Noori in Kabul.

"They are confused – in almost every district that the Taliban capture, they send a team of elders to talk to the soldiers and get them to surrender."

"It is an emergency situation for the Afghan government. They need to step up their counteroffensive as soon as possible," he added.

With vital air cover from the Americans massively curtailed by the closure of the Bagram base, the Taliban pressed on with their offensive across the north over the weekend, seizing most of Badakhshan and Takhar provinces with government forces holding little more than the provincial capitals.

The speed and ease of the Taliban's effective takeover of the provinces represent a massive psychological blow to the Afghan government.

Both provinces had once served as the strongholds for the anti-Taliban Northern Alliance during the gruesome civil war in the 1990s and were never routed by the militants.

The dire situation in the north was accompanied by reports that the Taliban were also inching closer to the provincial capitals in their southern strongholds of Kandahar and Helmand, with key districts on the outskirts of both cities taken by the group.

"We are so tired of this war. At least today the right thing was done, and one side should take control," said Shir Mohammad Barekzai, a resident of Helmand's Nawa district that was seized by the Taliban early on Monday. Since May 1 when the U.S. military began its final withdrawal, Afghan troops and the Taliban have clashed fiercely across the rugged countryside.

Armed men kidnap 140 school students in Nigeria

Police say they rescued 26 people, including a woman

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

KADUNA

Heavily-armed men kidnapped 140 students from a boarding school in northwestern Nigeria on Monday, a school official said, the latest in a wave of mass abductions targeting schoolchildren and students.

Criminal gangs often attack villages to loot, steal cattle and abduct for ransom in northwest and central Nigeria, but since the start of the year they have increasingly targeted schools and colleges.

The attackers opened fire and overpowered security guards after storming the Bethel Baptist High School in Kaduna state in the early hours of Monday, abducting most of the 165 pupils boarding there overnight.

"The kidnappers took away 140 students, only 25 students escaped. We still have no idea where the students were taken," Emmanuel Paul, a teacher at the students stay in dormitories and security is light, allowing them to easily transport large numbers of victims to forest hideouts to negotiate ransoms.

The kidnapping of Nigerian schoolchildren first made international headlines in 2014 when jihadist group Boko Haram snatched nearly 300 schoolgirls from a rural school in Chibok. Monday's attack was the fourth mass school kidnapping in Kaduna state since December.

Chinese President Xi Jinping on Monday told French President Emmanuel Macron and German Chancellor Angela Merkel he hoped China and Europe would expand cooperation to better respond to global challenges, state broadcaster CCTV said.

Ms. Merkel's office confirmed that the three leaders exchanged views on European Union-China relations.

"They also discussed international trade, climate protection and biodiversity," her office added in a statement.

"The conversation also revolved around cooperation in the fight against the COVID-19 pandemic, global vaccine supply, and international and regional issues."

Learn to live with virus, Johnson tells Britons

U.K. plans to lift curbs from July 19

ASSOCIATED PRESS

LONDON

British Prime Minister Boris Johnson confirmed on Monday that his government plans to scrap laws requiring face masks and social distancing later this month, though he acknowledged that lifting the restrictions will drive surging coronavirus cases even higher.

Mr. Johnson said legal controls will be replaced by "personal responsibility" when the country moves to the final stage of its lockdown-lifting roadmap. That is scheduled to happen on July 19, though he said a final decision would come on July 12.

This means people can throw away masks after months of enforced face-covering, though businesses and transit operators may still require them, and they will still be recommended in some enclosed spaces.

Boris Johnson

Mr. Johnson said he would set out how the country would "learn to live with this virus" – a major shift in tone from a leader who has previously painted COVID-19 as an enemy to be vanquished.

"I want to stress from the outset that this pandemic is far from over," he said, predicting that cases could hit 50,000 a day by July 19. "We must reconcile ourselves, sadly, to more deaths from COVID."

Indonesia faces oxygen shortage

ASSOCIATED PRESS

JAKARTA

Parts of Indonesia lack oxygen supplies as the number of critically ill COVID-19 patients who need it increases, the nation's pandemic response leader said on Monday, after dozens of sick people died at a public hospital that ran out of its central supply.

"Due to an increase of three to four times the amount (of oxygen) needed, the distribution has been hampered," said Luhut Binsar Pandjaitan, Coordinating Maritime Affairs and Investment Minister. The government is asking oxygen producers to dedicate their full supply to medical needs and will import it if needed, he said.

At least 63 COVID-19 patients died at Dr. Sardjito General Hospital in Yogyakarta city since Saturday, hospital spokesman Banu Hermawan said.

He said the migrants, all from sub-Saharan Africa, had been trying to reach Europe.

The spokesman said four boatloads of migrants had sunk since June 26 after setting off from Sfax.

Israel looks to renew law that keeps out Palestinian spouses

Critics call it a racist measure against the Arab minority

ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM

Israel's Parliament is set to vote on Monday on whether to renew a temporary law first enacted in 2003 that bars Arab citizens of Israel from extending citizenship or even residency to spouses from the occupied West Bank and Gaza.

Critics, including many left-wing and Arab lawmakers, say it's a racist measure aimed at restricting the growth of Israel's Arab minority, while supporters say it's needed for security purposes and to preserve Israel's Jewish character.

The law creates an array of difficulties for Palestinian families that span the drawn and largely invisible frontiers separating Israel from east Jerusalem, the West Bank and Gaza, territories it seized in the 1967 war that the Palestinians want for a future state.

"You want your security, it's no problem, you can check each case by itself," said Taiseer Khatib. His wife of more than 15 years, from the West Bank city of Jenin, must regularly apply for permits to live with him and their three children in Israel.

"There's no need for this collective punishment just because you are Palestinian," he said.

Israel's dominant right-wing parties strongly support the law, and it has been renewed every year since being enacted. But Israel's new government includes opponents of the measure, and the right-wing opposition led by former Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has warned it won't provide the votes needed to renew the law.

Ahead of the vote, PM Naftali Bennett called on Mr. Netanyahu to join him in renewing the law. "Harming state security for a quarter of a political point is not the right thing to do," he said.

'Services shrink most since July'

Survey-based June PMI for sector shows second successive contraction at 41.2

No takers: 'Four of the five broad service areas shrank, with consumer services contracting quickest'. ■ PTI

India's services sector shrank the most last month since July 2020, with the survey-based IHS Markit Purchasing Managers Index (PMI) for services at 41.2, reflecting a second successive monthly contraction in new business and increased job shedding by firms.

International demand for Indian services deteriorated further with new export orders falling for the sixteenth straight month. The sharp contraction in the June Services PMI, followed May's 46.4. A reading above 50 denotes expansion and one below it signifies a contraction in business activity.

"Business activity and new orders decreased in four out of the five broad areas of the service economy, with the fastest rates of contraction registered in consumer services," IHS Markit said in a statement. "Transport and storage was the only segment to post growth," the firm added.

Jobs fell in tandem with new orders. "The fall in employment was the seventh in consecutive months and the fastest over this period. The decline in jobs was widespread across the five monitored sub-sectors, and led by consumer services," it noted.

"The overall level of business sentiment was down for the third month in a row in June, reaching its lowest mark since last August," IHS Markit added, with the COVID-19 pandemic seen as the main threat to the outlook.

Uncertainty weighs

"Uncertainty about the path of the pandemic restricted business confidence among services firms, who were generally neutral in their forecasts for output in the year ahead," said Pollyanna De Lima, Economics Associate Director at IHS Markit.

June's manufacturing PMI had earlier slid to 48.4, and with services activity also retreating, the Composite PMI Output Index declined from 48.1 in May to 43.1, again registering the sharpest contraction since July 2020.

to the procedures.

Foreign Direct Investment up to 100% has been allowed under the government route in satellite-establishment and operation, subject to the sectoral guidelines of the Department of Space and ISRO. The processes for authorisation to launch a satellite, the frequency allocation mechanism and even the details of different agencies involved in these clearances were not clear, the Council said, calling for the regulatory structure to be refined.

"Today, the Department of Space acts as the regulator, but since it is a major service provider through ISRO, there is scope for a conflict of interest," the UKIBC said. "Service delivery and decision making are critical challenges. ISRO is a party involved in both, thus creating doubt in the mind of investors, if their licence applications will receive fair consideration," it added.

Emphasising that the private sector was concerned about sharing its intellectual property with the government, the business group said: "If ISRO is serious about partnering with the private sector, policymakers will have to view the industry as more than just a collection of manufacturers or service providers."

Global investors are also keenly tracking developments over the scrapped Antrix-Devas deal in the wake of the Indian government losing an international arbitration and Devas eyeing judicial enforcement of the arbitral award in overseas jurisdictions.

Indian National Space Promotion and Authorisation Centre (IN-SPACE), a newly created regulatory body, has received at least 26 applications from Indian and foreign firms that include proposals to set up ground stations and make and launch satellites.

Tata Motors to raise PV prices as costs soar

Tata Motors said it plans to increase the prices of its passenger-vehicle (PV) range due to an increase in input costs.

The auto major did not share details on the time frame of the intended price hike but noted that would happen 'shortly.'

The company intends to shortly mark an appropriate increase in prices of its range of cars and SUVs, Tata Motors said.

The steep climb in input costs, especially of essential raw materials, necessitates a transfer of at least some part of this increase to end customers, it added.

Phoenix Suns has the edge against injury-hit Milwaukee Bucks

The Paul-Booker combination may prove too strong if Antetokounmpo doesn't recover in time

NBA FINALS

SRINIVASAN RAMANI

The last time Phoenix Suns played in the NBA Finals was in 1993 when it lost to Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls. Milwaukee Bucks' last Finals appearance goes back even further – 1974, three years after it won its only NBA title. That these two teams have made it this far in a pandemic-affected season is a tribute to their coaching staff and key players.

Massive boost

Point 'god' Chris Paul's addition has been a massive boost to the Suns. Among the best guards in the league since 2005, he had never previously made the Finals – he has played in weaker sides and has also missed out because of injury in the past.

He has added veteran poise to the Monty Williams-coached team. The Suns have a terrific backcourt with the Paul-Devin Booker combination. Paul orchestrates and uses his high IQ to break down even the most sophisticated half-court defence while Booker is a dead-eye mid/long-range shooter who can be a go-to weapon when the chips are down. Centre DeAndre Ayton plays sturdily in the paint and has a feather soft touch at the rim that makes him a potent offensive weapon while young forward Mikal Bridges and gritty veteran Jae Crowder provide the three-and-defence nous to the outfit. The Suns also have good bench strength.

Formidable threat

The Bucks, however, will be a formidable threat, provided former MVP Giannis Antetokounmpo recovers from his knee hyper-extension problem. The side had to weather a tough challenge from the Brooklyn Nets in the conference semifinals and then had to reach deep within the roster when the 'Greek Freak' got injured.

The Bucks are a versatile squad – point guard Jrue Holiday is a sturdy rock who can chains, which will mean importing as well as exporting. If tariffs make manufacturing in India too expensive, investors will go elsewhere," the report noted. Even if India chooses tariffs as a policy tool, it should signal how import duties will rise over the coming years so investors get an incentive and the time to create domestic supply chains, it added.

Warning that the spate of 'unexpected and sharp' increases in import tariffs could be 'counterproductive', the UKIBC has suggested ways to mitigate the 'new challenges' posed by AatmaNirbhar Bharat and urged the government to correct course. U.K. businesses must not be affected by 'restrictive measures', they have pleaded, possibly by creating a 'carve-out' for them in the bilateral trade pact being negotiated.

The ban on the sale of items such as Scotch Whisky in the CSD canteens sends a wrong signal, the Council said, stressing that some products simply cannot be produced in India. Attempts to renegotiate power purchase agreements and ad-hoc policy shifts are also unnerving for infrastructure investors, it indicated.

World No.1 Ashleigh Barty reached the Wimbledon quarterfinals for the first time on Monday, beating French Open champion Barbora Krejcikova of the Czech Republic 7-5, 6-3. The defeat brought an end to Krejcikova's 15-match winning streak.

Barty may have won in straight sets, but that did not really tell the full tale of a hard-fought 95-minute encounter against an opponent who had yet to win a main draw singles grass match prior to Wimbledon.

Barty's serve was once again her Achilles heel, being broken early in the first set and then again in the second while serving for the match.

Fortunately for the Aussie supporters on Court No.1 – one of whom was holding a hand written card 'It's Barty's Party' – she found the return game when she most needed it, including the final break of serve to take the match.

"It was incredibly tough," Barty said. "I found some good stuff when it was important. It's down to the work myself and my team do in practice. It tastes sweeter when you win."

Earlier, Ons Jabeur continued her historic run, reaching the women's last eight with a 5-7, 6-1, 6-1 victory over Poland's 2020 French Open champion Iga Swiatek.

The 26-year-old is the first Tunisian woman to reach this stage at Wimbledon and will face Belarusian second seed Aryna Sabalenka, who defeated Elena Rybakina 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Jabeur showed great poise after she let slip a 5-4 lead while serving for the first set. She broke her 20-year-old opponent in the first game of the second and never looked back, taking 11 of the next 13 games. Jabeur celebrated

Anderson claims 1,000th First Class wicket

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE

LONDON

England paceman James Anderson claimed his 1,000th First Class wicket during a career-best spell of seven for 19 for Lancashire against Kent in the County championship on Monday.

The wicket came in trademark fashion, an outswinger that Kent batsman Heino Kuhn edged behind at Old Trafford, with wicket-keeper Dane Vilas taking the catch.

It was the 38-year-old paceman's fifth scalp of Kent's innings and saw him bring up another notable milestone in a career in which he has broken England Test records for appearances and wickets.

Anderson finished the first innings with seven wickets from his 10 overs as Lancashire bowled Kent out for just 74 in 26.2 overs. He was given a standing ovation from the crowd.

Greatest

England Cricket tweeted an emoji of a goat, which has become shorthand for 'greatest of all time', adding: "Congratulations on 1,000 First Class wickets."

Anderson, who turns 39 this month, made his First Class debut for Lancashire in 2002.

Most of his First Class wickets have come in Tests – he has 617 scalps in 162 matches, just two behind Anil Kumble, who is third on the all-time bowling list.

Luis Enrique thought for a couple of seconds, looked straight back at the questioner, and gave the curtest of replies.

"No," said the Spain coach, with a blank look on his face, after being asked if he had seen a better team than his at the European Championship.

An answer out of blind loyalty? Perhaps. Or was it the fact that Spain was the leading scorer at Euro 2020? Maybe. Or the fact that La Roja is on an unbeaten streak stretching back to October, a run of 13 games? Quite possibly.

Spain's opponent in the Euro semifinals on Tuesday might have something to say about all that.

Italy, another of the continent's traditional powers, brings an even better run of form to Wembley Stadium – a national-record 32 matches unbeaten, going all the way back to September 2018.

Maybe Enrique isn't aware, but Italy is rolling at the moment.

Much has changed since Roberto Mancini took charge in May 2018, with the team having evolved into a high-energy unit that presses hard and attacks at pace. But the Azzurri's defence needs little introduction.

more than a decade, and Italy has conceded only two goals so far.

Spain's defence, on the other hand, is a work in progress while centre-back Ameri Laporte integrates following his switch of nationality from France.

In attack, striker Alvaro Morata continues to frustrate for Spain and Enrique has seemingly yet to settle on his preferred wingers.

Italy, though, has had strong and reliable performances from striker Ciro Immobile and wide forward Lorenzo Insigne, the scorer of the decisive second goal against Belgium.

It's in midfield where Spain can seriously challenge Italy, potentially making it the department where the match could be won or lost. Jorginho, Nicola Barella and probably Marco Verratti for Italy versus Sergio Busquets, Pedri Gonzalez and Koke for Spain is a must-watch duel all by itself.

Neither team has made it this far in a major international competition since 2012, when they met in the Euro final in Kyiv. Spain won 4-0.

Two players remain from each country – Bonucci and Chiellini for Italy, and Jordi Alba and Busquets for Spain.

Boxer M.C. Mary Kom and men's hockey team skipper Manpreet Singh will be flag-bearers for India at the opening ceremony of Tokyo Olympics, scheduled to get underway on July 23.

Wrestler Bajrang Punia will be the flagbearer at the closing ceremony on August 8.

The Indian Olympic Association (IOA) has communicated the decision in this regard to the Organising Committee of the Games.

"It would be a huge moment for me given that it is my last Olympics. Who knows I might even get emotionally overwhelmed," said Mary Kom.

'Amazing'

"This is amazing, and I am speechless. I think it's a huge honour to be named the flag-bearer for the opening ceremony alongside the incredible Mary Kom," Manpreet was quoted as saying in a Hockey India release.

The country's lone individual Olympic gold-medallist

Abhinav Bindra was the flag-bearer at the opening ceremony of the 2016 Games in Rio de Janeiro.

Gender parity

At its executive board meeting last year, the International Olympic Committee had made provisions for flag-bearers from both genders at the opening ceremony.

"The IOC Executive Board also decided that there should be – for the first time ever – at least one female and one male athlete in every one of the 206 teams and the IOC Refugee Olympic Team participating at the Games of the Olympiad," IOC chief Thomas Bach had said.

Harika primed for World Cup in Russia
Says she is glad to have done well in Speed Chess

I was a profitable month of working from home for Dronavalli Harika. Finishing runner-up at the Women's Speed Chess Championship on Saturday made her richer by ₹9.28 lakh.

The superb performance has come as a huge morale-booster ahead of the World Cup, starting in Sochi, Russia, on July 10.

"I am glad I could do well in a strong tournament like Speed Chess, in which most of the best players took part," Harika told The Hindu over phone on Monday.

"It is disappointing that I lost in the final to Hou Yifan, but it felt nice that I could put up a strong fight."

She certainly did! Her Chinese opponent is the world's second-strongest woman player of all time.

fell behind considerably towards the end, but staged a splendid fightback.

Technical issues

Harika was troubled by technical issues during the final.

"I lost internet connectivity for a brief while following a power failure and that cost me a game. But, in online tournaments, one should be prepared for such problems," said the World No. 9.

"It was an excellent tournament for me, as I was able to defeat some strong players like World blitz champion Kateryn Lagno and former World champion Alexandra Kosteniuk," she said.

Looking ahead to the World Cup, she said she was just happy that she would be able to get back into a tournament hall once again.

"It is great to see that chess and the rest of the sporting world is returning to normalcy," she said.

"My last tournament was in Switzerland in March last year. I got home just before the entire world went into lockdown."

"The last one year has not been easy, as I realised that chess need not always be the priority in life."

Title against the odds for Mercedes'

Toto Wolff admits his team is fighting a tough battle

Formula One champion Mercedes is fighting against the odds now in its title battle with Red Bull, team boss Toto Wolff said after Sunday's Austrian Grand Prix dealt a fifth successive defeat.

Once-dominant Mercedes started the season chasing its eighth consecutive constructors' championship and with Lewis Hamilton seeking an unprecedented eighth drivers' title.

Hamilton is now 32 points behind Red Bull's Dutch youngster Max Verstappen, who has won five of nine races including the last three, and Mercedes is 44 points adrift of its Honda-powered rival.

"We are fighting a tough battle at the moment, against all odds as it stands," Wolff told reporters at the Red Bull Ring.

"It is against the odds for us now, and that's clear because they have an overall performance advantage.

"All these years I tried to keep our feet on the ground by not being carried away with performance and now I need to do the opposite."

Optimistic
Wolff recognised the momentum was going in the wrong direction but said Mercedes would fight to the end and needed to stay optimistic.

"There are 13 or 14 races to go, we are one DNF (retirement) away from Red Bull, no more, and we've lost more points than we should have lost to our own mistakes. We need to just get our act together overall."

"This is so far from over we just need to up our game, make less mistakes and continue to understand the car better and then we are still massively and absolutely in the hunt."

right time from so many officials at APSS and I am thankful to many including PET Pradeep sir, SAI athletics coaches M. Ranga Rao and N. Ramesh and the Director Dr. N. Parameeswara Ram," she said in a chat with The Hindu, tracing her journey.

"I got the support at the Olympics in Athens itself was a huge honour for me. I was informed just after the warm-up that I would be competing in the 4x400m relay and we finished eighth in the finals," said Geetha, who is married to former player and now secretary of Andhra Hockey Association

G. Harshavardhan.

"I was nervous and unprepared for the biggest experience of my career. But, somehow I could focus, tried to give my best when I ran the first lap," recalled the 2006 Asian Games gold medallist in 4x400m relay.

"In the 2008 Beijing Olympics, I was relatively relaxed but was disappointed finishing fourth in the semifinals (4x400m)," she said.

Bright chance

Geetha feels the current Indian athletes have very bright chance of winning medals.

"Thanks to the exposure and the wonderful support from the federation, government and SAI, they have been doing really well and I am sure they are going to win some unexpected medals in athletics," she said.
