Amid Cabinet reshuffle buzz, eight States get new Governors

Union Minister Thawarchand Gehlot appointed Karnataka Governor

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Ahead of a much-anticipated Cabinet reshuffle, the Rashtrapati Bhawan on Tuesday announced a slew of gubernatorial appointments, including that of Union Minister for Social Justice and Empowerment Thawarchand Gehlot as the Governor of Karnataka, replacing Vajubhai Vala.

This was the surest sign that a Cabinet reshuffle, regularly postponed since the COVID-19 outbreak in 2020, will finally take place as early as Wednesday evening.

Former MP and former BJP president of the erstwhile combined State of Andhra Pradesh K. Hari Babu was appointed the Governor of Mizoram, while senior BJP leader and former Tribal Affairs Minister in Gujarat Mangubhai Patel was named the Governor of Madhya Pradesh. Former Speaker of the Goa Assembly Rajendra Arlekar will be the Governor of Himachal Pradesh.

Several Governors saw a change in States. Former Union Minister Bandaru Dattatreya has been transferred from Himachal Pradesh to Haryana, senior BJP leader from Chhattisgarh Ramesh Bais from Tripura to Jharkhand, Satyadev Arya from Haryana to Tripura, and BJP

While it was a fairly extensive rejig in terms of Raj Bhavans, informed sources said the Cabinet rejig would be extensive as well. The Council of Ministers has around 28 vacancies, with only 53 of the 81 slots allowed under the Constitution occupied.

Government sources said that as many as 20 new faces would be included, and in total, around 24 Ministers belonging to the Other Backward Classes would find representation in the Council of Ministers at the end of this exercise. "Among these new faces will be very young MPs, bringing down the average age of the Council of Ministers to probably its lowest since Independence," said a senior government source.

Sources said equal focus would be on the professional qualifications of Ministers as well as community representation issues.

Will accept any decision taken by Cong. chief: Punjab CM

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Punjab Chief Minister Captain Amarinder Singh on Tuesday said he will accept any decision taken by Congress president Sonia Gandhi with regard to changes in the party in Punjab and the State government.

He was speaking after meeting Ms. Gandhi in an effort to end the factionalism in the State unit.

The meeting, which lasted for nearly 90 minutes, comes after a month-long exercise to put an end to the public war of words between the Chief Minister and cricketer-turned-politician Navjot Singh Sidhu.

Mr. Sidhu had resigned from the Cabinet over several differences, including handling of the 2015 sacerdotal issue.

Leader of the Opposition in the Rajya Sabha Mallikarjun Kharge, who headed the All India Congress Committee panel to resolve the issue, was present at the meeting that is said to have discussed the political situation as well as the governance issues in the State. Mr. Sidhu had met former party chief Rahul Gandhi and party general secretary Priyanka Gandhi Vadra last week.

It will, said government sources, "work to streamline the processes for ease of doing business for cooperatives and enable development of multi-State cooperative societies."

Rapid fall GST collections for June 2021 fell to a nine-month low of ₹92,849 crore

GST mop-up in June falls below ₹1 lakh cr.

It will see an uptick from July: Ministry

VIKAS DHOTI
NEW DELHI

Goods and Services Tax (GST) collections in June fell to ₹92,849 crore from ₹1.02 lakh crore in May, marking the first time after eight months that indirect tax collections fell below the ₹1 lakh crore mark.

While lockdowns aimed at curbing the second wave of COVID-19 hit economic activity and moderated GST revenues in June, the Union Finance Ministry said the collections were 2% higher than a year ago and would improve from this month.

"During May 2021, most of the States/UTs were under either complete or partial lockdown due to COVID," the Ministry said, citing a 30% fall in e-way bill generation in May from April's numbers.

"However, with reduction in caseload and easing of lockdowns, the e-way bills generated during June 2021 is 5.5 crore (from 3.99 crore in May) which indicates recovery of trade and business... It is expected that while the GST revenues have dipped during the month of June, the revenues will see an increase again from July onwards," it added.

The June GST figures are related to business transactions made during May and also include taxes on domestic transactions between June 5 and July 5, due to extended compliance deadlines for taxpayers.

Tax experts said the decline in GST revenues was expected. "With significant relaxations in lockdown and business supplies picking up the collections should see a definite uptick in the coming months," said Abhishek Jain, tax partner at EY.

Mathura court rejects bail plea of Kappan

Kerala journalist in jail for nine months

ANUJ KUMAR
GAZIABAD

A Mathura court on Tuesday rejected the bail plea of Kerala journalist Siddique Kappan, who has been in jail for nine months for various offences under the stringent Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act or UAPA.

In his bail order, Additional Sessions Judge Anil Kumar Pandey said considering the seriousness of evidence, the court didn't deem it fit to release the accused on bail.

He noted that the charge against Mr. Kappan was that he, along with the co-accused, promoted enmity in society and affected communal harmony. The court also said that during the investigation, incriminating material was recovered from him and that he received foreign funding for damaging the interest of the country.

Mr. Kappan and three others were arrested on October 4, 2020 at Maant in Mathura district when heading towards Hathras village, where a Dalit girl was allegedly raped and murdered by four dominant-caste men.

On June 15, a local court in Mathura discharged Mr. Kappan and others of charges under sections 151, 107 and 116 of the CrPC as the police failed to complete the investigation in six months.

Describing the prosecution version as "highly improbable", defence lawyer Wills Mathews reminded the court the petitioner was discharged of the offences that formed the basis of his arrest on October 5, 2020. Describing it as a fit case for bail, he said they would approach the Allahabad High Court.

It can accommodate 55 four-wheelers and 174 two-wheelers

STAFF REPORTER
NEW DELHI

The Delhi Metro Rail Corporation on Tuesday said the country's first FASTag/UPI-based cashless parking facility was launched at the Kashmere Gate metro station.

As a part of a Multi-Modal Integration (MMI) initiative, lanes for autos, taxis and e-rickshaws were also inaugurated at the station by DMRC Managing Director Mangu Singh.

Probe actual number of COVID deaths'

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI
The Delhi Congress on Tuesday demanded probe by a retired High Court judge to find out the actual COVID death toll in the Capital, alleging that many deaths, including those in home isolation, were not included in the official COVID-19 death category. The party alleged that the Delhi government was manipulating the numbers to skirt paying compensation.

Delhi Congress chief Ch. Anil Kumar said that Delhi Congress has been demanding that the families of those who died of COVID-19 be paid an ex gratia amount of ₹4 lakh under the Disaster Management Act and said that the sum of ₹50,000 announced by the Delhi government was meagre.

He said that in the fourth wave of the pandemic between April and May, municipal bodies issued 34,450 COVID death certificates, while the Delhi government put the death toll at 13,201.

Relief scheme for COVID victims' kin launched

Families can either register on portal or 'empathetic' Delhi govt. representative will visit their homes

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

NEW DELHI

Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal on Tuesday urged government officials appointed as surveyors to establish a relationship with families who had lost near and dear ones to COVID-19 in the process of providing financial relief to them.

₹50,000 to each family

Mr. Kejriwal said this while launching the 'Mukhyamantri COVID-19 Pariwar Aarthik Sahayata Yojna', a social security scheme for COVID-19-affected families here on Tuesday.

Under the scheme, Delhi government will disburse an ex gratia payment of was very lethal; we lost a lot of lives, a lot of children became orphans, a lot of families lost their breadwinners. There's no one to look after them now," he said.

"As a responsible and sensitive government, it is our duty to stand with these grieving families and provide them all the assistance we can. After a lot of discussions with our officers and the people of Delhi, we are launching the 'Mukhyamantri COVID-19 Pariwar Aarthik Sahayata Yojna,'" the CM said, while launching the scheme.

No questions would be asked, Mr. Kejriwal assured, if the person died because of COVID-19 and the affected family would receive ₹50,000.

Additionally, he said, ₹2,500 would be disbursed monthly to those families who had lost their breadwinners to the pandemic; children who were orphaned would be provided ₹2,500 monthly till they turn 25, Mr. Kejriwal said.

Two options to register

"There are two options. First, families can register on the portal themselves. Second, a Delhi government representative will visit their homes. As a responsible and sensitive government, we will not wait for people to apply, we will approach them on our own as well," he said.

There would not be any scrutiny.

"The representatives are not going to these homes to scrutinise the documents of these grieving families. If any documents are missing, it is the responsibility of the representatives and the government to make them available without putting pressure on the grieving families," he said.

Referring to government representatives who will be collecting applications, the Chief Minister asked them to be empathetic and understanding towards these families. He also requested them not to put them under stress because of any missing papers as they were already going through a lot.

The Special Public Prosecutor (SPP) said that although notice was issued to parties concerned for the purposes of the inquiry, the same could not be concluded on account of COVID-19-induced lockdown.

Vigilance report

The court also reminded the SPP that the police's earlier vigilance report on the issue "had nothing in it" and that the court was not satisfied with the report.

Mr. Tanha, in his plea, had said he was aggrieved by various news reports appearing in electronic media that alleged he had confessed to organising and inciting communal riots that occurred in north-east Delhi.

He had contended that the action of the media houses in placing such documents in the public violated the programme code.

Mr. Tanha had alleged that he was coerced by police officers to sign certain papers and make statements while in their custody.

He had contended that the alleged disclosure statements, which have become a subject matter of news reports, were not given voluntarily and are inadmissible as evidence in court.

Deputy Commissioner of Police (Special Cell) in an affidavit had stated that Delhi Police was also "aggrieved" by the news report in which the alleged confessional statement of Mr. Tanha was leaked.

Save us from demolition: Khoribasti residents

Protesters march to PMO to submit memorandum, appeal to repeal SC order

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT

GURUGRAM

A large number of residents of Faridabad's Khoribasti marched towards the Prime Minister's office in New Delhi and submitted a memorandum with an appeal to save the colony from the Supreme Court-ordered demolition.

Led by former Lok Sabha MP and Congress national spokesperson Udit Raj, the residents, including women, carried out a march towards the Prime Minister's Office under the aegis of All India Confederation of Scheduled Caste and Scheduled Tribes organisations.

Carrying placards that read, "Save Khoribasti, Save Migrants" and "Please Save Khoribasti", the demonstrators started the march from Atul Grover Road. However, they were stopped by the police at Jantar Mantar. The protesters appealed to the government to get the Supreme Court order repealed so that millions of lives can be saved during the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic.

Dr. Raj attacked the Haryana government saying that the State government should have made rehabilitation arrangements before displacement, but unfortunately it did not happen. The people have built their homes with blood and sweat, which were being demolished in front of their own eyes, said Dr. Raj, adding that this would not be tolerated at any cost.

The Supreme Court had last month directed Faridabad municipal corporation to demolish the houses in 170-acre Khoribasti on the forest land within six weeks. The residents have been demanding that the government should rehabilitate them or revoke the SC order to provide them relief.

Forcing to vacate

Sanjay Raj, national treasurer of the confederation, said that power and water supply to the houses in the colony was snapped to force them to vacate their houses. Social activist Meenu Verma, also part of the demonstration, said: "The third wave of COVID-19 has arrived and in this situation it was inhumane to make thousands of children homeless. If electricity and water supply is not restored in the colony, thousands of lives will be put to danger during the pandemic".

The State Secretariat of the Communist Party of India (Marxist) in Haryana has strongly condemned the illegal and inhumane actions of the State government for en masse eviction of thousands of Khoribasti residents.

BHEL Supplies Medical Oxygen Plant in record time

In response to the critical situation arising out of shortage of medical oxygen in the second half of April '21, Bharat Heavy Electricals Limited (BHEL) has once again risen to the occasion by venturing into the manufacture of medical oxygen plants. BHEL's first Medical Oxygen plant developed and manufactured using CSIR-IIP technology was formally handed over to SLG Hospitals – Hyderabad, in a flagging off ceremony in the presence of CMD and senior officials of BHEL as well as SLG Hospitals at BHEL's Hyderabad unit, in a record time of less than 35 days from receipt of order. BHEL has signed an agreement with the Council of Scientific and Industrial Research-Indian Institute of Petroleum (CSIR-IIP) on 03.05.21 for transfer of technology for Medical Oxygen Plants of 500 LPM and higher using Pressure Vacuum Swing Adsorption (PVSA) technology. The agreement entails development and deployment of 500 LPM medical oxygen plants and design upscaling to 1000 LPM and more. Work for development of a prototype was initiated on war footing in three of BHEL's biggest manufacturing units (Hyderabad, Bhopal and Haridwar). In parallel, work on design upscaling of 1000 LPM was also taken up. BHEL has already received commercial orders for supply of both 500 LPM and 1000 LPM PVSA plants to state hospitals. The other two units of BHEL are also manufacturing this equipment on a fast track basis, and a total of 10 units are to be supplied in the month of July. Deployment of these plants will further supplement the efforts initiated by the company during the second wave of Covid-19 towards supply of medical oxygen, wherein BHEL's units located at Bhopal and Haridwar supplied over 5,75,000 cubic meters (~ 80,000 cylinders) of medical oxygen to hospitals in their vicinity. BHEL being the responsible corporate citizen it is, stands firm in its resolve to contribute wholeheartedly in meeting the nation's requirement to combat COVID-19.

SO2: Sulphur Dioxide. Short-term exposure can harm the respiratory system, making breathing difficult. It can affect visibility by reacting with other air particles to form haze and stain culturally important objects such as statues and monuments.

NO: Nitrogen Dioxide. Aggravates respiratory illness, causes haze to form by reacting with other air particles, causes acid rain, pollutes coastal waters.

CO: Carbon monoxide. High concentration in air reduces oxygen supply to critical organs like the heart and brain. At very high levels, it can cause dizziness, confusion, unconsciousness and even death.

PM2.5 & PM10: Particulate matter pollution can cause irritation of the eyes, nose and throat, coughing, chest tightness and shortness of breath, reducing lung function, irregular heartbeat, asthma attacks, heart attacks and premature death in people with heart or lung disease

Maharashtra tables amendments to Centre's farm laws

Fadnavis calls this an eyewash, says State govt. is taking forward policies of Centre

STAFF REPORTER
MUMBAI

The Maharashtra government on Tuesday introduced amendment bills in the State legislature to the three farm Acts passed by the Union government last August.

The bill to amend the Farmers' Empowerment and Protection Agreement on Price Assurance and Farm Service Act, 2020, presented by Maharashtra's Agriculture Minister Dadaji Bhuse, stated that farming agreement shall not be valid unless the price paid to farmer is equal to or greater than the minimum support price (MSP).

It also proposed that the farmer and sponsor can make farming agreement below MSP with mutual consent for maximum period of two years. "For crops where MSP is not declared then they may enter into a farming agreement with a mutually agreed price," it said. It has also made the provision for punishment of imprisonment of minimum three years for harassment to the farmer.

Deputy Chief Minister Ajit Pawar said the draft will be open for suggestions and objections for next two months and will be finalised in the winter session of the Assembly. "There was no need to delay the implementation of these Acts in the State," he said.

State's Co-operation Minister Balasaheb Patil introduced the amendment to the Farmers' Produce Trade and Commerce (

A death foretold

There is a pattern of institutional oppression behind the demise of Father Stan Swamy

It was a death his well-wishers feared would happen and one he had anticipated. Father Stan Swamy, an 84-year-old Jesuit priest, known for his service and activism in the cause of Adivasis, died nine months into his unjust imprisonment on tenuous charges. A death that was simply allowed to happen despite being foretold by his deteriorating health in prison will weigh on the country's collective conscience for long. His age and frailty drew no sympathy from either the prosecuting agency or the trial court, which clung to the state narrative of there being grounds to believe that he was part of a Maoist plot to overthrow the government. Despite being a fit case for bail, he was denied bail, mainly due to the statutory bar on bail under the anti-terrorism law invoked against him. The best the diffident judiciary could do for him was a spell of hospitalisation, even as the octogenarian pleaded that he be given interim bail to be with his friends or allowed to die in prison. The Bombay High Court did issue notice on his bail petition, observing that he was entitled to bail, but his end came in a hospital even before the matter could be taken up for final disposal. Much of the blame and accountability for his death should be on the NIA, which perversely opposed his release, and the court which could have granted interim bail weeks earlier.

It was fairly obvious that his prison stay, especially during the pandemic, was detrimental to his well-being. A good two months elapsed between the High Court seeking the NIA's response to his bail plea on medical grounds and his death. The same court had intervened to grant interim bail to Varavara Rao, another elderly co-accused, holding that bail can be granted "purely on the grounds of sickness, advanced age, infirmity and health conditions", especially if incarceration amounted to endangering life. It is systemic and institutional failure that another undertrial placed in similar circumstances did not get the benefit of this humane approach. A pattern of institutional oppression can be seen in the events, from the denial of a sipper in jail to his death while in custody. Two larger issues here are the questionable legality of the bail-denying feature of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act and the validity of the Bhima-Koregaon case itself. It is time the higher judiciary examined these; especially the attempt to link a simple case arising out of violence a day after the Elgar Parishad, a commemorative event held in Pune, and an alleged Maoist plot involving lawyers, activists and human rights defenders. To make matters worse, credible reports that some of the electronic evidence gathered in this case could have been planted remotely by malware were never investigated. The call for accountability for Fr. Swamy's death rings painfully true.

Cultural genocide

Canada should ensure justice for indigenous community who suffered systemic violence

The recent discovery of hundreds of graves in Canada has put the spotlight back on its dark past, when indigenous people faced systemic discrimination and violence. In June, the Cowessess First Nation, an indigenous organisation, found 751 unmarked graves at the site of a former residential school in Saskatchewan. This came a month after another indigenous organisation discovered the remains of 215 children at a closed residential school in British Columbia. Canada's residential school system was a telling example of how indigenous people were treated. Between 1882 and 1996, an estimated 150,000 children were sent to residential schools, that were funded by the federal government and run mostly by the Catholic Church. Most of these students were forcefully taken away from their families. And thousands never returned. In 1883, Canada's first Prime Minister, Sir John A. Macdonald, defended in Parliament the system of residential schools, saying indigenous students should be kept away from their parents, "who are savages". The children were not allowed to speak their languages or practise their culture. Many were abused. An estimated 4,000 children died, mainly due to TB, malnutrition and other illnesses resulting from the squalid conditions in the schools. Despite these horrors, the residential school system continued for over a century.

In 2008, Prime Minister Stephen Harper issued a formal apology. The Government also set up a Truth and Reconciliation Commission to document the history and the lasting impact of the school system on the indigenous communities. In 2015, the commission called the violence against the indigenous students a "cultural genocide". It has made 94 "calls to action" to different levels of the government and communities that included independent investigations and steps to protect Aboriginal rights and culture. It also asked the Catholic Church to apologise and take steps toward reconciliation. The Vatican is yet to formally apologise for the schools. Justin Trudeau, who came to power in 2015, had promised that addressing the grievances of the indigenous communities was a core agenda. But six years later, indigenous organisations say the authorities are half-hearted. The back-to-back discoveries of unmarked graves strengthen indigenous organisations' claims that the actual number of the dead is way above the estimates of the commission. Mr. Trudeau has expressed "guilt" over the abuses. But that is not enough. His government should assist indigenous organisations to find unmarked graves. He should order investigations into the residential schools with graves to get to the bottom of the matter. Mr. Trudeau should also accelerate steps to implement all the recommendations of the Reconciliation Commission to ensure reparations are done to the country's indigenous community.

Fresh stirrings on federalism as a new politics

There are factors, which if harnessed well, that can create a political moment for a principled politics of federalism

YAMINI AIYAR & RAHUL VERMA

Between vaccine wars, heated debates over the Goods and Services Tax (GST), personnel battles like the fracas over West Bengal's Chief Secretary, and the pushback against controversial regulations in Lakshadweep, is India ready for a new federal bargain?

Emboldened by victories in the recent State Assembly elections, the idea of a third 'federal' front is once again gaining political cache as was evident in the Sharad Pawar organised Opposition meet. The Dravida Munnetra Kazhagam, since taking office, has begun to craft an ideological narrative on State rights, by re-introducing the term Union into the public discourse and pushing back against increased fiscal centralisation. Is this renewed emphasis on federalism, a genuine opportunity for forging a new politics?

Federalism in India has always had political relevance, but except for the States Reorganisation Act, federalism has rarely been an axis of political mobilisation. This was true even in the days of coalition politics when State politics mattered to national electoral outcomes. Fiscal and administrative centralisation persisted despite nearly two decades of coalition governments. Ironically, rather than deepen federalism, the contingencies of electoral politics have created significant impediments to creating a political consensus for genuine federalism. When confronted with entrenched centralisation of the present regime, the challenge is, ironically, even greater.

Nationalism on strong wicket

First, the rhetoric of nationalism has greater political purchase. Ideologically, the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has had relatively little patience with federalism as a device to accommodate India's multiple linguistic, religious, and ethnic identities. Post-2014, the BJP has couched its discomfiture with federalism in the grammar of development and nationalism, which has mass electoral appeal. To accelerate progress, India must become 'one nation, one market', 'one nation, one ration card', 'one nation, one grid'. In this framing, federalism as a principle necessary for negotiating diverse political contexts and identity claims risks being equated with regionalism and a narrow parochialism that is anti-development and anti-national.

Thus, a politics for deepening federalism will need to overcome a nationalist rhetoric that pits federalism against nationalism and development. This is a hard ask, especially because most regional parties have failed to uphold principles of decentralisation in their own backyard.

Second, and relatedly, despite a rhetorical commitment to federalism, the politics of federalism has remained contingent rather than principled. As Pratap Bhanu Mehta has pointed out over the decades, federal principles have been bent in all kinds of ways to co-produce a political culture of flexible federalism – "federalism for me, but not for thee".

Federalism in this rendition is reduced to a game of political upmanship and remains restricted to a partisan tussle rather than a regions' genuine demand for accommodation. Especially, when claimants of greater federalism often maintain silence on unilateral decisions that affect other States.

Take for instance, the downgrading of a full-fledged State in Jammu and Kashmir into a Union Territory in 2019, or more recently, the notification of the NCT of Delhi (Amendment) Act, 2021. This blatant undermining of State's rights hardly witnessed protest by parties that were not directly affected by these. Upholding federalism requires political maturity and a commitment to the federal principle. This is lacking in our politics.

Divide among States

Third, the increased economic and governance divergence between States. Economic growth trajectories since liberalisation have been characterised by growing spatial divergence. Across all key indicators, southern (and western) States have outperformed much of northern and eastern India resulting in a greater divergence rather than expected convergence with growth. This has created a context where collective action amongst States becomes difficult as poorer regions of India contribute far less to the economy but require greater fiscal resources to overcome their economic fragilities. Glimpses of these emerging tensions were visible in the debates around the 15th Finance Commission (FC) when the Government of India mandated the commission to use the 2011 Census rather than the established practice of using the 1971 Census to determine revenue share across States.

This, Southern states feared, risked penalising States that had successfully controlled population growth by reducing their share in the overall resource pool. The 15th Finance Commission, through its recommendations, deftly avoided a political crisis but the growing divergence between richer and poorer States, remains an important source of tension in inter-State relations that can become a real impediment to collective action amongst States. With the impending delimitation exercise due in 2026, these tensions will only increase.

These challenges notwithstanding, the BJP's impatience with federalism affords an opportunity for regional parties to craft a new federal bargain. At one level, the BJP's homogenising ideological project risks creating new forms of cultural alienation and associated regional tensions as occurred during the Citizenship (Amendment) Act protests in Assam. There is a very real possibility of the emergence of new forms of regional sub-nationalism, glimpses of which were visible during the recent Assembly elections particularly in West Bengal.

Fiscal management

Moreover, the realities of India's macro-fiscal position risk increasing the fragility of State finances. Weak fiscal management has brought the Union government on the brink of what economist Rathin Roy has called a silent fiscal crisis. The Union's response has been to squeeze revenue from States by increasing cesses. Its insistence on giving GST compensation to States as loans (after long delays) and increasing State shares in central schemes. The pandemic-induced economic crisis has only exaggerated this.

Against this backdrop, if harnessed well, both sub-nationalist sentiments and the need to reclaim fiscal federalism create a political moment for a principled politics of federalism. However, there are risks along the way. As Suhas Palshikar has argued, the politics of regional identity is isolationist by its very nature. An effort at collective political action for federalism based on identity concerns will have to overcome this risk. On the fiscal side, richer States must find a way of sharing the burden with the poorer States. States will have to show political maturity to make necessary compromises if they are to negotiate existing tensions and win the collective battle with the Union. An inter-State platform that brings States together in a routine dialogue on matters of fiscal federalism could be the starting point for building trust and a common agenda. The seeds of this were planted in the debates over the 15th Finance Commission and the GST.

Finally, beyond principles, a renewed politics of federalism is also an electoral necessity. No coalition has succeeded, in the long term, without a glue that binds it. Forging a political consensus on federalism can be that glue. But this would require immense patience and maturity from regional parties. Are they up to the task?

Venezuela's reflections on the Carabobo

Two hundred years after a 'geopolitical campaign', South American States still struggle to be independent

VIJAY PRASHAD

On June 24, 1821, Simón Bolívar, the great Liberator, led his forces against the Spanish Army at the Battle of Carabobo. Five days later, Bolívar entered Caracas in triumph. The Spanish had not yet been defeated across South America, but the Spanish monarchy no longer had the will to fight back. The rest of the battles – including the Battle of Pichincha on May 24, 1822 – merely finished up what Carabobo had established, namely that South America's many republics wanted to be sovereign. Bolívar's comrades assembled in Cúcuta to write a new constitution and to elect him as the president. But Bolívar would not rest. He mounted his horse, went southwards to ensure that the sovereignty of South America would be permanent.

The story of Bolívar and Carabobo is deeply felt among Venezuelans of all classes. When I asked Venezuela's Foreign Minister Jorge Arreaza about the meaning of this battle, he dug deep into the history books to explain that the Carabobo "was more than a battle. It was a geopolitical campaign". After Bolívar's armies defeated the Spanish on those battlefields west of Caracas, the new States that emerged from Gran Colombia (Colombia and Venezuela) down to Bolivia (1825) produced a dynamic sense of their own sovereignty. Carabobo was "an important step towards the whole independence of South America".

A decade ago, I remember hearing Hugo Chávez on Carabobo, his voice emotional, his sense of the possibilities opened up by Bolívar total. No wonder that Chávez named the process opened up by his election in 1998 as the Bolivarian Revolution and that he named the regional process, the Bolivarian Alliance for the Peoples of Our America (ALBA). Venezuela has also celebrated the battle with a Bicentennial Congress of the Peoples of the World. The theme is not the independence of South America alone. It is sovereignty for the world.

The woes of States

Two hundred years after Carabobo, the South American States struggle to be independent. Venezuela itself remains locked in a dangerous conflict with the United States, whose government continues to tighten the sanctions regime that inflicts harm against the Venezuelan people. Recently, the U.S. government's secondary sanctions pushed UBS to refuse to complete transactions by the Venezuelan government to the COVAX alliance so as to ensure delivery of vaccines for COVID-19. Increasingly, U.S. sanctions block the ability of Venezuela to conduct normal commercial relations with other countries. The U.S. has been able to exercise this overwhelming power over Venezuela – and several other countries under unilateral U.S. sanctions – because of U.S. dominance over trade and investment, international financial systems, and global information flows.

Monroe Doctrine

Just when Bolívar's armies defeated the Spanish, the U.S. President James Monroe on December 2, 1823, crafted the Monroe Doctrine. This policy suggested that now that European powers had lost their grip on the Americas, the United States of America will be the guardian of continental stability. At that time, the U.S. did not have the technological or military means to subordinate all of the hemisphere. In 1898, when the U.S. intervened to remove the last vestiges of Spanish colonialism in Cuba and Puerto Rico, it took over both islands. Subsequently, U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt in his corollary to Monroe's doctrine in 1904 said that the U.S. would exercise its influence over the Americas. Military invasions from Nicaragua to Panama (1909) and coups from Guatemala (1954) to Bolivia (2019) brought Monroe's speech into the world.

The U.S. stand

It meant little that U.S. Secretary of State John Kerry said in 2013, "The era of the Monroe Doctrine is over." This statement came four years after the U.S.-backed coup in Honduras, and also before the U.S. coup in Bolivia. Mr. Kerry made that remark while he served under President Barack Obama and Vice-President Joe Biden. Mr. Biden, now U.S. President, has no intention of renouncing the Monroe Doctrine. His Secretary of State, Antony Blinken, has interfered in the legal processes in Bolivia, put in place a former Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agent, Lisa Kenna, as Ambassador to Peru, and deepened U.S. sanctions against Venezuela. For these men, there is no evidence of a policy shift.

In February 2021, UN Special Rapporteur on the negative impact of unilateral coercive measures, Alena Douhan, wrote that due to the U.S. unilateral sanctions, the Venezuelan government revenue shrank by 99% and the country is living on 1% of its pre-sanctions income. Venezuela, she wrote, "faces a lack of necessary machinery, spare parts, electricity, water, fuel, gas, food, and medicine". Over the past six years, 2.5 million Venezuelans have slipped into food insecurity, while electricity generation levels have fallen to 20%. Venezuelan assets frozen in the United States, the United Kingdom, and Portuguese banks amount to U.S.$6 billion.

But Venezuelans remain defiant. "We stand firm," says Mr. Arreaza, who has just returned to Caracas from Moscow. Monroe is another name for unipolarity. Despite the residual power of the U.S., Monroe is of the past. Carabobo, for the Venezuelans, signals multipolarity. It is, they believe, the way forward.

Father Stan Swamy

There cannot be anything more frustrating than the court hearing the bail application of Father Stan Swamy when he was on a ventilator. The entire system seems to be on a ventilator. Nobody can express their grief beyond that. The narratives show that all this was because of his continued incarceration in jail, and not granting him bail. When it was pointed out to the court that it took 10 days for him to be transferred from the jail to the hospital, the court expressed its shock. In ordinary parlance, this is called passing the buck. However, what was actually shocking was the court's refusal to grant him bail. When Gandhiji was confined to the Aga Khan Palace and was seriously ill, the colonial rulers had the presence of mind to release him lest take the ignominy of him dying in their custody. They were prepared to give him the best of treatment. Yet, from jail to a hospital does not make much of a difference. It is still custody. The jurisprudence seems to be not custodial rights but custodian's rights. Where are we heading?

N.G.R. PRASAD,
Chennai

■ A certain rivalry has always existed between the state and activists at all times. But the incarceration of a veteran social worker, on vague charges, and which must be read as an attempt by the Government to capture and monopolise the nationalistic narrative, and his death, has ended up creating a martyr in Father Stan Swamy, and has tarnished the image of the state machinery.

PREETHA SALLI,
Mumbai

■ Democracy is also about the quintessential premise that every individual has certain basic rights which includes the right to live and die with dignity. But this right has not been served many a time in the largest democracy of the world, and Father Stan Swamy's death has brought out this ghastly truth of our system. It is disturbing that a man who fought for the most marginalised sections of the society, had to appeal in court to get a straw and a sipper. His death is not just a death of an individual but it is also the death of a belief in democracy and justice.

ADITYA JHINGAN,
Kirkiya, Harda, Madhya Pradesh

■ It is a sad reflection of the growing insensitivity and dehumanisation of our criminal justice system which is bent at will by the rulers of the day to suit their partisan ends. The sky would not have fallen had he been granted bail and the law allowed to take its own course. His words from jail, "We will still sing in chorus. A caged bird can still sing."

SUKUMARAN C.V.,
Palakkad, Kerala

■ Democracy should not be so insensitive to the should inspire those who care for human rights in the country to raise their voice in a chorus to turn the spotlight on disturbing aberrations in the country.

MANOHAR ALEMBATH,
Kannur, Kerala

■ The antagonism of the Indian state towards human rights activists who speak for the rights of Adivasis stems from its commitment to corporate interests. Whether it is the UPA or the NDA, people who fight against the human-rights violations of tribal people and their continuous displacement are hunted out. It was in colonial India that people struggling for the rights of fellow citizens were imprisoned without trial. To see the same situation continue in independent India is really harrowing.

SUKUMARAN C.V.,
Palakkad, Kerala

■ The Government should not be so insensitive to the extent that it is left to the media to highlight the pathetic plight of such (elderly and unwell) prisoners, which results in collective anger and anguish. The judiciary should perhaps be given more freedom to coordinate with human rights commissions to decide the issue of release on bail on a case-to-case basis for all prisoners who are elderly. One wonders what the fate of other old, infirm and vulnerable prisoners is like.

D. NAGARJUNA,
Hyderabad

■ His passing is a black letter day. Even the judiciary that failed to grant timely bail to Father Stan Swamy on medical grounds cannot escape. He was subject to inhuman treatment including denying him a very humane request for a sipper with straw to drink water. One cannot help but contrast his plight with political figures released on bail on medical grounds and then making it big in political circles.

Seeking a paradigm shift in mental health care

WHO's guidance on community mental health services balances care and support with rights and participation

VANDANA GOPIKUMAR & KESHAV DESIRAJU

Recently, a High Court suggested that homeless persons with health conditions be branded with a permanent tattoo, when vaccinated against COVID-19, since tracking a 'floating population' may be cumbersome. Earlier judgments have also suggested 'round ups' of such persons to facilitate pathways into care. These are possibly well-intentioned directives, but what follows is that bewildered persons are huddled in a vehicle and admitted into shelters or mental hospitals that are usually crowded, yet lonely. What does this tell us about the way homelessness and mental illness are regarded in 'polite' society?

A responsive care system

Persons with mental health conditions need a responsive care system that inspires hope and participation without which their lives are empty. In many countries, persons with severe mental health conditions live in shackles in their homes, in over-crowded hospitals, and even in prison. On the other hand, many persons with mental health issues live and even die alone on the streets.

Three losses dominate the mental health systems narrative: dignity, agency and personhood. Far-sighted changes in policy and laws have often not taken root and many laws fail to meet international human rights standards. Many also do not account for cultural, social and political contexts resulting in moral rhetoric that doesn't change the scenario of inadequate care. Society's responses are often based on conditioning and perceptions, often verging on visceral forms of prejudice. This results in an "othering" of persons who seem different from dominant groups. Hence, even well-intentioned judgments could set off unintended negative, even grave, consequences. There is also the social legacy of the asylum, and of psychiatry and mental illness itself, that guides our imagination in how care is organised.

lonial Bombay, wrote that "doctors interpreted a patient's refusal to wear clothing as a sign of morbidity, and clothing became a way of civilising the savage – the violent Indian man and the promiscuous Indian woman". Individual preference and indigenous culture were substituted with what the coloniser thought was appropriate. Similarly, medieval London boasted of a hospital for the care of persons with mental illness, St. Mary of Bethlehem, which soon turned into a 'bedlam', a poorhouse and a site of shocking atrocities.

We must understand mental health conditions for what they are and for how they are associated with disadvantage. These situations are linked, but not always so. Therefore, not all distress can be medicalised. It is against this complex background of distress arising out of medical conditions and from inequitable social systems, of good intentions and calamitous consequences, that we welcome the Guidance on Community Mental Health Services recently launched by the World Health Organization. The Guidance, which includes three models from India, addresses the issue from 'the same side' as the mental health service user and focuses on the co-production of knowledge and on good practices built around the key themes of crisis services, peer support, supported living, community outreach, hospital-based services and comprehensive mental health service networks. Drawn from 22 countries, these models balance care and support with rights and participation.

Afiya House in the U.S. is driven by peers and offers respite to persons who have significant emotional or mental distress. People can stay for up to seven nights when they are connected to networks that support recovery. Services are non-coercive and persons can opt to stay or leave based on discussions with peer supporters. Tupu Ake, a New Zealand-based recovery house service, welcomes 'guests' from various ethnicities. Atmiyata in Gujarat employs a stepped-care approach using community-based volunteers who identify persons in distress, offer counselling support and enable access to social care benefits. Evaluation of the service indicates better general health, better quality of life and social functioning. Naya Daur in West Bengal works with local networks and volunteers who support homeless persons through their outreach programme and enable access to food, clothing, counselling, shelter and housing. Home Again, a programme of The Banyan in Tamil Nadu, facilitates residence options in regular neighbourhoods while also offering graded levels of supportive services for persons with severe disabilities. It emphasises socio-cultural participation, 'neurodiversity' and normalisation of mental health conditions. Peer leaders provide wisdom from their lived experience to support others in distress.

The practice of open dialogue, a therapeutic practice that originated in Finland, runs through many programmes in the Guidance. This practice, conducted in homes or in service settings, combines individual and systemic family therapy with a focus on the centrality of relationships and promotion of connectedness through family and support networks. This approach trains the therapist in de-escalation of distress and breaks power differentials that allow for free expression.

Aimed at providing newer perspectives to governments and policymakers, approaches in the new WHO Guidance are designed to make community inclusion and dialogic practice a way of life. With emphasis on social care components such as work force participation, pensions and housing, increased investments in health and social care seem imperative.

A network of services

Recently, the Supreme Court and the Madras High Court have advised vaccinations for those in mental health care homes and for those homeless and living with a mental illness. While those in institutions should access this support at the earliest, for those homeless and who opt not to enter mental health establishments en masse from where exit pathways may be laborious, there are two paths. In the first, drives will be conducted and persons with mental illness will be housed in overcrowded institutions, with scant regard for agency or for social determinants of ill health. The other would aim to provide a network of services ranging from soup kitchens at vantage points to mobile mental health and social care clinics, non-intimidating guest homes at village panchayats with access to toilets and the comfort of a welcoming team, and well-being kiosks that offer a basic income and/or facilitate livelihoods. Small emergency care and recovery centres for those who need crisis support instead of larger hospitals, and long-term inclusive living options in an environment that values diversity and celebrates social mixing, will reframe the archaic narrative of how mental health care is to be provided.

With a strong health system, Tamil Nadu is well placed to demonstrate through pilots, and an exclusive policy for homeless persons with mental illness, that political intent, good governance and creative thinking can solve complex problems and cater to the needs of the ultra-vulnerable.

Meanwhile, a mental health service user whom we met interpreted her tattoo as 'we are all one'. If we can learn to 'be on the same side' as the mental health service user, it seems possible that we can learn to respect human diversity.

Unpacking China's game plan

It is upgrading defence infrastructure in the Tibetan plateau to nullify the disadvantages that its airpower has vis-à-vis India

MANMOHAN BAHADUR

Aviation websites are abuzz with reports of a rapid upgradation of aviation infrastructure in Tibet. While the expansion of the road and railway network there has been subject to much debate, it is the speed of upgradation of airfields, construction of hardened aircraft shelters, new runways, aprons, underground storage and tunnelling into mountainsides, all visible in high-resolution satellite photos, that should have alarm bells ringing in New Delhi. This needs an analysis for two reasons. First, is there any link between these constructions and the procrastination by China in the talks for reducing tensions in Eastern Ladakh? What is the tactical aim of the Chinese with these upgradations? Second, how would these changes affect the balance of air power between the Indian Air Force (IAF) and People's Liberation Army Air Force (PLAAF) in the medium to long term?

On a weak wicket in the air

While the larger strategic aim of the Chinese in upping the ante by violating decades-old understandings in 2020 is still matter of debate, what Beijing discovered to its discomfiture was that India did not yield any ground, and actually occupied vantage points in the south Pangong Tso area to balance out some sectoral disadvantages. This firmness was backed by deterrent IAF firepower and it was clear to the Chinese that they were on a weak wicket in the air due to three reasons. First, the IAF's high strike potential, with its aircraft having the advantage of a string of airfields all along the foothills of the Himalayas; that they are at low altitudes permit a full armament load to be carried. Second, Chinese airfields in Tibet were few, widely spaced out and hence not mutually supportive; there were gaps in the air defence structure too that the IAF would utilise to interdict targets in the rear. Third, most Tibetan airfields are at altitudes above 10,000 ft, severely restricting the payload of PLAAF aircraft. Additional infrastructure was required to make up these deficiencies since the positive asymmetry of IAF would be detrimental to China's plans to gain any territorial advantage; 'time' had to be made an ally in this endeavour.

The balancing out of IAF's asymmetry was only possible through a rapid upgradation of airfield and air defence infrastructure – this would need two years at least. The Chinese plan has been cleverly implemented through what can only be called a tactical pause, obtained via talks that were commenced but have meandered since. A 'breakthrough' in the eyeball-to-eyeball posture came in February when a simultaneous withdrawal in certain areas was agreed on, including a pulling back of Indian troops from their vantage points in areas south of Pangong Tso. With the threat to the PLA Moldo garrison removed, the Chinese re-adapted their procrastination position in subsequent talks regarding restoring status quo ante in Depsang/Daulat Beg Oldi and Hot Springs, which are of vital interest to India. This is the classic buying-time-through-talks technique and is still ongoing. In the tactical pause won surreptitiously, the Chinese have gone on the upgradation drive to nullify the disadvantages that Chinese airpower has vis-à-vis India; gaps in their air defence scheme are being plugged through the new infrastructure and positioning of new air defence radars and missile systems that would afford them a layered air defence setting and affect the balance of power in the medium to long term.

Trying to turn the tables

The IAF is equipped and trained for offensive action. In all the previous conflicts the IAF conducted aggressive strikes, besides providing active close support to ground forces. The odd exception was the 1962 India-China conflict where the IAF's substantial strike potential was nullified by a political decision to not use it. The equipment accretion profile is a pointer to the offensive role as seen by the acquisition of Jaguars, Mirage-2000, Sukhois and now the Rafale. Seen from the prism of air power doctrine, this points to India's strategy of deterrence by punishment: 'don't mess with us as we have the means and power to hurt you'. By strengthening their air defence architecture, the Chinese are trying to turn the tables and deter India through a strategy of denial, i.e., to dissuade the IAF by signalling that it would be costly in terms of aircraft and aircrew losses. For this turnaround to take effect would take China about two years. If China succeeds in its endeavour, India may lose the trump card of positive air power asymmetry that it now holds.

What should India do? The air defence upgradation drive is surely being monitored, but that is not enough. If status quo ante on ground is not obtained soon, it may be too late a year or two from now. The façade of talks should be acknowledged for its devious aim. India's posture and demands at the talks (which one supposes has an IAF representative too) must reflect its understanding of China's game plan. There is no other way out.

Vacancies send a wrong signal

Leaving top posts in the government unoccupied affects governance and is demoralising for officers

M.P. NATHANAEL

The vacancies in the Central government and the States in recent years have had a deleterious effect on governance. For months on end, top slots in important government agencies remain vacant. Delays in promotions and appointments not only affect the organisations but also tend to demoralise the officials who await promotions after vacancies arise.

Posts waiting to be filled

The post of the Chairman of the National Human Rights Commission was kept vacant until June this year even though the previous Chairman, H. L. Dattu, retired in December 2020. The post of the Director of the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) too was kept vacant until the recent appointment of Subodh Kumar Jaiswal. The post had been vacant since February after Rishi Kumar Shukla retired.

The Chief Election Commissioner (CEC), Sunil Arora, retired on April 12 amidst an aggressive election campaign and polling in West Bengal and four other States this year leaving just two members in the Commission. One of them became CEC by virtue of his seniority in the Election Commission. In case of a disagreement on any issue between the two of them, a solution would have become difficult. The Centre appointed Anup Chandra Pandey as the new Election Commissioner in June. Meanwhile, the Association for Democratic Reforms (ADR) has filed a public interest litigation in the Supreme Court demanding the appointment of Election Commissioners by a committee, as is done in the case of appointment of the Director of the CBI, and not by the Centre as is the case now. ADR has referred to the 255th Report of Law Commission that had recommended that Election Commissioners be appointed by a high-powered committee. Though the high-powered committee headed by the Prime Minister has two members – the Chief Justice of India and the Leader of the Opposition in the Lok Sabha – the Opposition leader has little say in the selection process. If the Prime Minister decides on a candidate and the CJI consents, the Opposition leader's dissenting note carries no weight. There is a need, therefore, to expand the high-powered committee to include at least two more members of eminence with proven integrity for the selection process – preferably a retired police officer and a Chief Minister of a State governed by a party other than that of the party of the Prime Minister.

After Hrushikesh Senapati's retirement in November last, the National Council of Educational Research and Training, which is largely responsible for chalkling out the education policy of the country, is headless. Of the 40 Central universities across the country, nearly half are without regular Vice-Chancellors.

Rakesh Asthana assumed additional charge of the Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB) from December 2019. After his appointment as Director-General (DG) of the Border Security Force in August last, he continues to hold charge of the NCB as DG. Kuldip Singh, DG of the Central Reserve Police Force, now also heads the National Investigation Agency after the previous incumbent, Y.C. Modi, retired on May 31 last.

Impact of vacancies

Similar vacancies or examples of officers holding additional charge exist in other ministries, commissions and departments, but the government appears to turn a blind eye to the malefic effect it has on governance. Vacancies for such long periods tend to paralyse the backbone of these organisations. Appointments to higher echelons can be announced well in time. Delays in important appointments send a wrong signal to the nation. If the government can announce its chiefs and vice chiefs months in advance, there is no reason why this cannot be done in all other ministries and departments. A time frame needs to be worked out to announce top appointments at least a month in advance. Political considerations need to be pushed to the back seat for a clean and honest administration.

DATA POINT

Jab gap

As the vaccination drive picks up pace in India, the gender gap in vaccination rate (people vaccinated per 1,000 individuals) continues to widen. The gap varies among the States. Except in Himachal Pradesh, there was a gap in all the 19 other States analysed. In India, as of July 4, 349 per every 1,000 women aged above 18 years and 390 per every 1,000 men aged above 18 have received at least one dose. According to the NFHS-5, in many States, more women said that they would let their husbands decide about their health care than those who said they will take decisions themselves.

By Vignesh Radhakrishnan, Suman Sen and Jasmin Nihalani

STATE-WISE | The graph shows the State-wise vaccination rate among adult men (●) and women (●). The gap was widest in J&K (men: 579; women: 435). H.P. was the only State where the vaccination rate was higher among adult women (men: 715; women: 727). The analysis is limited to 20 States for which relevant data are available. The population figures are govt. estimates for 2021. A.P. and Telangana's estimates were ignored as they were unreliable

GAP WIDENS | The graph shows the difference between India's vaccination rate among adult men and women. The difference increased rapidly after the new vaccination policy kicked in. On May 1, 138 out of every 1,000 adult men had received at least one dose, while the figure was 131 for adult women (the difference of seven is plotted in the graph). On June 1, the difference increased to 19 (men: 191 out of 1,000; women: 172 out of 1,000). By July 4, it further worsened to 41 (men: 390 of 1,000; women: 349 out of 1,000)

DECISION-MAKERS | Interestingly, in J&K, where the gender gap in the vaccination rate was the widest, the lowest share of women said that they themselves make decisions about their healthcare (5.2%). About 26% of women in the UT said their husbands mainly make decisions about their health. In H.P., where the gender gap is the narrowest, the highest share of women said they themselves take decisions related to their health care. The table lists the States for which NFHS-5 has data and those which have reliable population estimates

Release Bhima Koregaon case accused: UN body

This follows similar concerns from the U.N. Special Rapporteur on Human Rights Defenders and the European Union (E.U.) Human Rights Chief on Monday.

"High Commissioner Michelle Bachelet and the U.N.'s independent experts have repeatedly raised the cases of Father Stan and 15 other human rights defenders associated with the same events with the government of India over the past three years and urged their release from pre-trial detention," said the statement issued by the OHCHR spokesperson.

In written responses to queries from The Hindu, OHCHR spokesperson Liz Throssel said Ms. Bachelet had raised the cases both privately and publicly on "numerous occasions" including in a statement on "shrinking of civic space in India" last November.

The U.N. Special Rapporteurs have also raised the issue of human rights defenders in a couple of communications to the Indian government, and are expected to release another update on the issue next month.

"The High Commissioner has also raised concerns over the use of the Unlawful Activities (Prevention) Act (UAPA) in relation to human rights defenders, a law Father Stan was challenging before Indian courts days before he died," the rights agency said, making a particular mention of the UAPA, that allows authorities to detain suspects without charging them, and allows courts to hold them without bail.

"In light of the continued, severe impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, it is even more urgent that States, including India, release every person detained without a sufficient legal basis, including those detained simply for expressing critical or dissenting views. This would be in line with the Indian judiciary's calls to decongest the prisons," the OHCHR statement said.

Will accept any decision by Cong. chief: Amarinder

While Ms. Vadra is said to have visited Ms. Gandhi before her meeting with Capt. Amarinder, Mr. Gandhi is said to have been part of the meeting. There was, however, no official word about it.

"Whatever decision the Congress president takes, we will implement it in Punjab. The decisions taken by Congress chief on anything – the party and the government – will be acceptable," Captain Amarinder told reporters. The Chief Minister said the party was geared up for the 2022 Assembly polls and maintained that he meets the Congress president whenever he is in Delhi and Tuesday's meet was one such meet.

The meeting, however, assumes significance as the party high command is all set to revamp of the Pradesh Congress Committee (PCC) as well as carry out a reshuffle.

GST mop-up in June falls below ₹1 lakh crore

The Central government said that the daily average generation of e-way bills for the first two weeks of April was 20 lakh, which came down to 16 lakh by the last week of that month, and further to 12 lakh in two weeks of May.

Since May 23, the average generation of e-way bills has been increasing and has reached again to 20 lakh level since the week beginning June 20, an official statement said.

Of the nearly ₹93,000 crore collected, Central GST accounted for ₹16,424 crore, State GST ₹20,397 crore, and Integrated GST of ₹49,079 crore (which included ₹25,762 crore collected on import of goods). Compensation cess collections were ₹6,949 crore, and included ₹809 crore levied on goods imports.

Delhi HC raps Twitter over officer posting

"How long does the process of appointing a grievance officer take? If Twitter thinks it can take as much time as it wants in our country, I will not permit that," Justice Palli cautioned.

Justice Palli directed Twitter's counsel to come up with a clear picture of the compliance timeline by July 8, the next date of hearing. "Otherwise you [Twitter] are in trouble," the judge warned. Senior advocate Sajan Poovayya, representing Twitter, sought time to seek instructions on the specific timeline to complete the grievance officer appointment.

Additional Solicitor General (ASG) Chetan Sharma, representing the Centre, said there had been a non-compliance of the IT Rules by Twitter for over 42 days. "Facebook has removed 3 crore contents, Instagram has removed 18 lakh, Google has removed 3 lakh, Twitter can certainly do better," the ASG said.

The High Court also took strong objection to Twitter's counsel informing it on the last date of hearing that the micro-blogging site has already appointed a resident grievance officer on May 28, 2021. In view of the statement, the court had granted time to Twitter to submit a counter-affidavit.

"The said reply has been filed. A perusal shows that Twitter had as on May 31, 2021 appointed only an interim resident grievance officer, which was not brought to the notice of the court," the court noted.

Twitter had failed to comply with India's law regulating tech companies rendering their services as 'intermediaries', an affidavit by the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology stated.

Bengal passes resolution to set up Council

KOLKATA

The West Bengal Assembly on Tuesday passed a resolution to set up Legislative Council with a two-thirds majority.

While 196 favoured, 69 opposed the resolution moved by Minister of Parliamentary Affairs Partha Chatterjee under Article 169. Senior Minister Subrata Mukherjee and Deputy Chief Whip Tapas Roy spoke in favour of it. The BJP legislators voted against it.

Leader of the Opposition Suvenu Adhikari said the passage of the resolution does not mean that the Council has come into existence.

"Under Article 169, Parliament will have to provide for creation of the Council. This means that it has not been created," Mr. Adhikari said.

Chief Minister Mamata Banerjee had announced the setting up of the Council during the run-up to the Assembly polls.

18 suggestions

After talking to a cross-section of party leaders, the three member AICC panel had given 18 suggestions to the party chief including "suitably accommodating" Mr. Sidhu. The Chief Minister is said to be opposed to Mr. Sidhu becoming the PCC chief and wants the PCC to be headed by Hindu community leader and not by another Jat Sikh since the government is headed by one.

There is also talk about appointing two Deputy Chief Ministers including one from the Dalit community to send a strong political signal to the community that make up a sizeable part of the electorate in the State.

The Indian Air Force has issued a tender for procurement of 10 counter-drone systems, Counter Unmanned Aircraft System (CUAS), through indigenous route. Incidentally, the Request For Information was published a day after the attack on Jammu air base believed to have been carried out using drones.

"The CUAS is intended to detect, track, identify, designate and neutralize hostile UAS. Laser Directed Energy Weapon (Laser-DWE) is essentially required as a kill option," the RFI published on June 28 said on the intended use of the equipment and operational requirements.

All the ten CUAS are required in mobile configuration mounted on indigenous vehicles with cross-country capability and powered by indigenous electrical power supply.

'Super censorship': MPs' panel grills Ministry

Bill will allow government to order recertification of films

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Standing Committee on Information and Technology headed by Congress leader Shashi Tharoor, at a meeting on Tuesday, grilled the Ministry of Information and Broadcasting on the "super censorship" clause introduced in the draft Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill 2021.

The committee members, according to sources, asked the Ministry to explain the "reasons" and "motivation" for introducing the provision which allows the government to order recertification for a film already certified by the Central Board of Film Certification (CBFC). This was the first meeting of the Parliamentary Panel on the Bill.

The Ministry officials, sources said, were at pains to explain. "They claimed that the Bill has been misunderstood and that the Ministry itself will have no powers to censor any film. The Bill only allows the Ministry to return the film for recertification," one of the members said on condition of anonymity. Ministry officials also said that the clause would only be invoked if the content of a film impinged on security and integrity of the nation.

Not satisfied with the explanation, the members asked why, when there were existing penal provisions to deal with such a situation, did the Ministry feel it necessary to incorporate this in the Bill. "If any person or group feels that a film or part of it hurts their sentiment or imperils the country, they can go to court. Our basic question was why should this power be adjudicated be vested with a bureaucrat," another member said.

The members, sources said, also pointed to the Supreme Court order passed in 2000 that the government could not exercise revisional powers on films already certified by the CBFC.

The Bill was placed in the public domain till July 2 inviting comments.

Filmmakers across the country has slammed the Bill, with veteran filmmaker Adoor Gopalakrishnan calling it an attempt by the government to bring in "super censorship".

IT rules: Centre asks SC to transfer pleas to itself

Various HCs are hearing the petitions

LEGAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

The Centre has asked the Supreme Court to transfer to itself cases pending in various High Courts challenging the validity of the Information Technology (Intermediary Guidelines and Digital Media Ethics Code) Rules of 2021.

The High Courts, including Delhi, Bombay, Madras and Kerala, are hearing the petitions against the new IT Rules.

The Delhi High Court is hearing the case concerning Twitter.

Recently, the government informed the Delhi High Court that micro-blogging site Twitter had failed to comply with the law regulating tech companies rendering their services as "intermediaries".

The Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (Meity), in an affidavit, said despite three months being granted to all significant Social Media Intermediaries (SSMIs) to comply with the Rules, Twitter has failed to fully comply with the same.

Last week, Twitter informed the court that the interim Resident Grievance Officer and the interim National Contact Person had resigned from their positions in June.

The tech giant had said it was in the final stages of appointing a replacement. Meanwhile, "the grievances of Indian users are being addressed by the Grievance Officer".

On September 24, 2019, hearing a petition filed by Facebook, the apex court had shown deep concern at the utilisation of social media for committing crime. It said the medium had become a source for pornography. Paedophiles used social media in "big way". Criminals exploit it to run weapons, drugs and contraband. Hate and violence are shared and spread through these virtual platforms.

Union Cabinet reshuffle likely today

LJP rebel Paras, ex-Assam CM Sonowal, Scindia among those tipped for inclusion

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

Prime Minister Narendra Modi is likely to effect the first reshuffle in his Council of Ministers on Wednesday evening, sources said.

Former Chief Ministers and MPs who have had administrative experience in other States would be part of the new Cabinet.

Former Assam Chief Minister Sarbananda Sonowal and former Deputy Chief Minister of Bihar Sushil Kumar Modi are expected to be included as is Congress rebel Jyotiraditya Scindia.

Power tussle
NDIA ally Lok Janshakti Party's Pashupati Paras is also tipped to be included in the Cabinet, setting off an angry tirade from his estranged nephew, Chirag Paswan, who said he had written to the Prime Minister not to appoint Mr. Paras as a Minister in his government on the LJP quota.

The slot became vacant after the passing away of LJP founder Ram Vilas Paswan, which also plunged the party into a split.

"Making him [Pashupati Paras] a Union Minister on LJP quota isn't possible as the party's executive board expelled him. I have informed the Prime Minister through a letter. If he is appointed, then I shall go to court," Mr. Chirag Paswan said.

The Janata Dal (U) is also bargaining for more slots than they had been promised, which was basically one Cabinet post and a Minister of State berth. The party wanted two Cabinet berths.

Late evening talks were being held between JD(U) national president and MP

R.C.P. Singh and the BJP national leadership in New Delhi at the time of writing.

Influx of candidates

The national capital saw an influx of candidates likely to take oath as Ministers.

Apart from Mr. Scindia, Mr. Paras and Mr. Sonowal, sources told The Hindu that former Chief Minister of Maharashtra and currently BJP-supported Rajya Sabha member Narayan Rane has been asked to come to Delhi. He is expected to meet Union Home Minister Amit Shah.

The extensive Cabinet reshuffle will not be the end of political appointments, as Mr. Gehlot's exit from the Council of Ministers also means that the BJP will have to look for another Leader of the House for the Rajya Sabha, and another member for the party's parliamentary board, its highest decision-making body.

House of Dalit village chief damaged

Opposition parties in Uttar Pradesh have accused the police of vandalising the house of a Dalit pradhan in Azamgarh district and damaging his property. The police, however, say they are false allegations being levelled against them by the Dalit pradhan's family and his associates in a bid to avoid arrest in an assault case on two police constables earlier in the day.

Bahujan Samaj Party chief Mayawati said on Tuesday that it was "absolutely shameful" that instead of providing justice to the "victim" Dalits, the police resorted to atrocities and caused them financial loss. She demanded that the Uttar Pradesh government take strict action against the culprits and compensate the victims.

The BSP also deputed a senior leader to meet the family in Azamgarh.

The city-based National Film Archive of India (NFAI) on Tuesday acquired the original camera negative of filmmaker Rajkumar Hirani's popular satire PK.

Besides the negative, Mr. Hirani handed over nearly 300 cans of initial rushes of the film and outtakes of his other hugely popular Aamir Khan star 3 Idiots (2009) to NFAI Director Prakash Magdu for preservation in the premier film archive.

"The significance of the acquisition of the negative of PK (2014) is that it is one of the last films to be shot on celluloid," said Mr. Magdu.

Mr. Magdu said negatives of the director's earlier films such as Munnabhai MBBS (2003), Lage Raho Munnabhai (2006) and 3 Idiots (2009) – all major commercial successes –

"It is the duty of a filmmaker to ensure that the original negatives of his or her films are preserved for posterity and for the entertainment and study of future generations of cineastes and scholars. I appeal to all filmmakers to support the NFAI in this important endeavour," said Mr. Hirani.

10 accused at Taloja to go on hunger strike

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
MUMBAI

All the 10 Bhima Koregaon case accused, lodged at the Taloja Central Jail, will go on a day-long hunger strike on Wednesday in protest against the "institutional murder" of Father Stan Swamy. The tribal rights activist, who was denied bail despite his deteriorating health, died at a Mumbai hospital on Monday.

The decision was taken by Rona Wilson, Surendra Gadling, Sudhir Dhawale, Mahesh Raut, Arun Ferreira, Vernon Gonsalves, Gautam Navlakha, Anand Teltumbde, Ramesh Gaichor and Sagar Gorkhe, according to family members whom they spoke to from the prison.

A statement released by the accused said that Fr. Swamy's death was a very well-thought-out conspiracy and the accused blame the National Investigation Agency (NIA) and the former Superintendent of Taloja prison, Kaustubh Kurlekar, for his death. They also demanded a judicial inquiry into the death.

Valley, marking the worst violence on the border since 1967. The LAC crisis remains unresolved, and talks to restore the status quo appear deadlocked. India has made clear to China that relations cannot be returned to normal unless there is full disengagement and de-escalation along the border.

This is the first time Mr. Modi has publicly confirmed speaking with the Dalai Lama since he took over as Prime Minister in 2014. Mr. Modi and the Dalai Lama previously exchanged greetings on Twitter in 2015. Mr. Modi is also known to have spoken with the Dalai Lama on the phone previously, including to wish him on his birthday in 2019, but that call was not publicly acknowledged at the time.

The July 2019 call came amid a period of India and China trying to repair relations following the 2017 border stand-off in Doklam. Mr. Modi travelled to China for an "informal summit" with President Xi Jinping in April 2018, and Mr. Xi travelled to Mamallapuram for another in October 2019.

That process of repairing the ties was derailed with the May 2020 border crisis along the Line of Actual Control (LAC) and the June 15, 2020, clashes in Galwan.

'U.S. left Afghan airbase without notice'

The new commander was not informed before the American troops' departure, say officials

ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. left Afghanistan's Bagram Airfield after nearly 20 years by shutting off the electricity and slipping away in the night without notifying the base's new Afghan commander, who discovered the Americans' departure more than two hours after they left, said Afghan military officials.

Afghanistan's army showed off the sprawling airbase on Monday, providing a first glimpse of what had been the epicentre of America's war to unseat the Taliban and hunt down the al-Qaeda perpetrators of the 9/11 attacks on America.

The U.S. announced on Friday it had vacated its biggest airfield in the country in advance of a final withdrawal the Pentagon says will be completed by the end of August.

"We [heard] some rumour that the Americans had left Bagram ... and finally by seven o'clock in the morning, we understood that it was confirmed that they had already left Bagram," said Gen. Mir Asadullah Kohistani, Bagram's new commander.

U.S. military spokesman Col. Sonny Leggett did not address the complaints of many Afghan soldiers who inherited the abandoned airfield, instead referring to a statement last week. Col. Leggett said in the statement that they had coordinated their departures with Afghanistan's leaders.

Before the Afghan army could take control of the airfield, it was invaded by a small army of looters, who ransacked barracks and rummaged through storage tents before being evicted, according to Afghan military officials.

"At first, we thought maybe they were the Taliban," said Abdul Raouf, a soldier. He said the U.S. called from the Kabul airport and said "we are here at the airport in Kabul".

The last U.S. soldiers are likely to remain until an agreement to protect the Kabul Hamid Karzai International Airport, which is expected to be done by Turkey, is completed.

Pullout of troops over 90% complete: Pentagon

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE WASHINGTON

The withdrawal of U.S. forces from Afghanistan is more than 90% completed, the Pentagon's Central Command announced on Tuesday.

CentCom said it had handed over seven former U.S. bases to the Afghan forces and had evacuated the equivalent of nearly 1,000 C-17 air freighter loads of equipment from the country, ahead of the September deadline to complete the pullout.

Amid rising Taliban wins, consulates shut down

ASSOCIATED PRESS KABUL

A surge of Taliban wins in northern Afghanistan has caused some countries to close their consulates in the region, while in Tajikistan, reservists are being called up to reinforce the southern border, according to officials. The consulates of Turkey and Russia have reportedly closed in Mazar-e-Sharif. Iran said it has restricted activities at its consulate.

The consulates of Uzbekistan, Tajikistan and Pakistan have reduced their services, and Turkey and Russia have closed their consulates.

14 years in jail for Belarus's Viktor Babariko

ASSOCIATED PRESS KYIV

The Supreme Court in Belarus on Tuesday sentenced a former contender in the 2020 presidential race to 14 years in prison on corruption charges in a case that has been widely seen as politically motivated.

Viktor Babariko was arrested two months before the 2020 vote and has remained in jail since.

On Tuesday, he was found guilty of taking a bribe and money laundering. The court handed him a 14-year prison sentence and a fine roughly equal to $57,000. He will not be able to appeal the court's verdict.

Wreckage of Russian plane found

All 28 on board feared dead; the An-26 aircraft had gone missing on Tuesday wreckage from a plane that went missing on Tuesday in Russia's Far East region of Kamchatka was found around 5 km (three miles) away from a runway at an airport on the coast where it was supposed to land, officials said.

An Antonov An-26 plane with 22 passengers and six crew members, flying from the city of Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky to the town of Palana on the Okhotsk Sea coast, missed a scheduled communication and disappeared from radar as it was on approach for landing.

The governor of Kamchatka, Vladimir Solodov, told the Interfax news agency

According to media reports, none of the 28 people on board survived the crash. The plane belonged to a company called Kamchatka Aviation Enterprise and had been in operation since 1982, Russian state news agency Tass reported.

'Technically sound' The company's director, Alexei Khabarov, told Interfax that the plane was technically sound before taking off in Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsky.

A criminal investigation into the incident has been launched. Kamchatka Aviation Enterprise's deputy director, Sergei Gorb, said that the plane "practically crashed into a sea cliff", which wasn't supposed to be in its landing trajectory.

The plane was on approach for landing when contact was lost about 10 km (six miles) away from Palana's airport.

The head of the local government in Palana, Olga Mokhireva, was aboard the flight, spokespersons of the Kamchatka government said.

In 2012, an Antonov An-28 plane belonging to Kamchatka Aviation Enterprise crashed into a mountain while flying from Petropavlovsk-Kamchatsk and coming in for a landing in Palana. A total of 14 people were on board and 10 of them were killed. Both pilots, who were among the dead, were found to have alcohol in their blood, Tass reported.

U.K. court quashes 1972 convictions of 3 black men

They were accused of trying to rob a policeman

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE LONDON

Appeal court judges in London on Tuesday overturned the convictions of three black men for attempting to rob a corrupt police officer nearly half a century ago. The Court of Appeal cleared the trio following a referral by a criminal cases review commission, and comes just over a year after the acquittals of four men in a similar case. The latest ruling is the third time convictions have been overturned based on the tarnished evidence of discredited British Transport Police officer Detective Sergeant Derek Ridgewell.

The three men – all aged between 17 and 20 at the time – and three friends were accused of trying to rob Ridgewell in 1972 on the London Underground while travelling from Stockwell station, south London.

All bar one of "The Stockwell Six" were convicted, largely on the word of the corrupt officer, who himself was jailed for seven years and died of a heart attack in prison in 1982.

At their trial, the accused told jurors that officers, including Ridgewell, who had previously served in the South Rhodesian, now Zimbabwean, police force, had lied and subjected them to violence and threats.

"It is most unfortunate that it has taken nearly 50 years to rectify the injustice," Julian Flaux, one of the three judges to hear the case, said on Tuesday. The two remaining members of the Stockwell Six who were convicted have not yet been traced.

Lawyers for the men said it was "deeply troubling" that it had taken so long for the convictions to be overturned.

Ethiopia resumes filling disputed dam

Egypt and Sudan have opposed the project on the Nile

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE CAIRO

Ethiopia has started the second phase of filling a mega-dam's reservoir on the upper Blue Nile, said Egypt and Sudan, raising tensions Tuesday ahead of an upcoming UN Security Council meeting on the issue.

Both Cairo and Khartoum said they had been notified by Addis Ababa that the second phase of filling had begun at the Grand Ethiopian Renaissance Dam.

Egypt's Irrigation Ministry late Monday expressed its "firm rejection of this unilateral measure" and Sudan's Foreign Ministry on Tuesday followed suit, labelling the move a "risk and imminent threat". In Addis Ababa, the offices of Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed and Irrigation Minister Seleshi Be-keli did not immediately respond to AFP's requests for comment.

The huge dam, set to be Africa's largest hydroelectric project when completed, has sparked an almost decade-long diplomatic stand-off between Addis Ababa and downstream nations Egypt and Sudan. Ethiopia says the project is essential to its development, but Cairo and Khartoum fear it could restrict their citizens' water access.

Both governments have been pushing Addis Ababa to ink a binding deal over the filling and operation of the dam, and have urged the UN Security Council to take up the matter.

Addis Ababa had previously announced it would proceed to the second stage of filling in July, with or without a deal.

Xi reshuffles PLA border command leadership

Xu Qiling appointed head of Western Theatre command

ANANTH KRISHNAN

China's President Xi Jinping has replaced the head of the military's Western Theatre Command, which borders India, appointing a new General to lead the military's biggest command.

Mr. Xi on Monday promoted four senior military officers, including one who has been at the centre of the border tensions with India as the head of the People's Liberation Army's (PLA) Ground Forces or Army in the border Western Theatre Command, to the highest rank of General.

Mr. Xi, who also heads the Central Military Commission (CMC), presented the certificates of the orders to them at a ceremony held by the CMC on Monday, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

The promoted officers were named as Xu Qiling, Commander of the PLA's Western Theatre Command, Wang Xiubin, Commander of the Southern Theatre Command, Liu Zhenli, Commander of the PLA Army, and Ju Qiansheng, Commander of the PLA Strategic Support Force.

mers is that the April mass mobilisation by the PLA and subsequent multiple LAC transgressions, coming after annual summer exercises, was likely planned at the level of the Western Theatre Command, and that the higher levels, such as the Central Military Commission headed by Mr. Xi, were most likely only involved after the June 15 clash in Galwan Valley.

In December 2020, seven months into the tensions, General Zhang took over as Commander of the entire Western Theater Command overseeing all its forces, replacing General Zhao Zongqi, the long-standing Commander, who retired at 65. In March, General Zhao was rewarded with a post-retirement appointment as the Vice-Chairman of the National People's Congress (NPC) or parliamentary committee on foreign affairs, a top advisory body.

General Xu, 59, now becomes the third head of the Command since tensions began. He was appointed under General Zhang, as Commander of the Western Theatre's Ground Forces or Army, on June 1, 2020, around a month into the tensions and before the June 15, 2020 Galwan Valley clash.

Israel PM suffers defeat over Arab family unification ban

Yamina party member votes with Opposition, causing a tie

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE JERUSALEM

Israel's Prime Minister Naftali Bennett accused his opponents on Tuesday of harming national security as his coalition failed to extend a ban on citizenship for Palestinian spouses from the West Bank and Gaza.

Earlier, the coalition had sought a deal for nearly all of its members to back the ban's extension. The PM had also called for Opposition right-wingers to support the measure, urging unity on national security grounds. But that failed when a member of the Yamina party, Ami Chikli, voted with the Opposition, tweeting later that the debate over the Bill was "proof" that a government without a "clear Zionist majority" would be "problematic". His defection left Parliament tied at 59 to 59 votes, meaning the measure would lapse later Tuesday.

Oil soars to multi-year highs after OPEC+ talks collapse

Brent hits highest level since 2018 after producers fail to agree on raising output

LONDON

Oil prices climbed to multi-year highs on Tuesday after OPEC+ producers clashed over plans to raise supply to meet rising global demand.

Brent crude hit a session high of $77.84, a level not seen since October 2018, before losing momentum and easing to trade 25 cents, or 0.3% lower, at $76.91 a barrel by 1149 GMT.

U.S. West Texas Intermediate (WTI) crude futures traded up 75 cents, or 1%, at $76.91, after reaching $76.98 earlier in the session, the highest since November 2014.

from the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) with Russia and others, abandoned talks on Monday as negotiations failed to close divisions within the group.

No date for further talks has been announced.

The United Arab Emirates said it would go along with output increases but rejected a separate proposal to extend curbs to end-2022 from an existing April deadline.

Some OPEC+ sources said they still believed OPEC+ would resume discussions this month and agree to pump more from August while others said current curbs might stay in place.

Brent seen at $80/barrel

Goldman Sachs said the collapse of the talks has introduced uncertainty into the group's production path, while maintaining its view of an $80 per barrel Brent price and gradual increase in output early next year.

In a sign of a tightening market, top oil exporter Saudi Arabia raised the August official selling prices of all crude grades it sells to Asia, the state oil producer Aramco said on Tuesday.

Tyre industry to see 13-15% growth in FY22

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT
NEW DELHI

After two years of contraction, the Indian tyre industry is expected to grow 13-15% in unit terms and 7.9% in tonnes during the current financial year, according to ICRA said.

The growth will be aided by a sharp recovery in original equipment manufacturer (OEM) tyre demand, lower base effect of FY21, improving pace of vaccination, continued preference for personal mobility and healthy rural cash flows, ICRA said in a note.

"Tyre demand has been relatively more resilient as the replacement demand insulates it from cyclical to a large extent," said Srikanth Krishnamurthy, VP and co-group head, ICRA.

Rising ATF prices a challenge: ICRA

NEW DELHI

Domestic air passenger traffic in June registered a growth of 41-42% at 29-30 lakh trips compared with about 19.8 lakh trips in May, ratings agency ICRA said.

On a sequential basis, the number of departures in June 2021 was higher by 14-15% at 31,700 departure flights as COVID-19 infections witnessed a downward trajectory, ICRA said.

"For June 2021, the average daily departures were at nearly 1,100, significantly higher than average daily departures of nearly 700 in June 2020, and higher than nearly 900 in May 2021, though it remained significantly lower than nearly 2,000 in April 2021," according to Kinjal Shah, V-P & co-group head, ICRA.

"The average number of passengers per flight during June 2021 was 94, against an average of 77 passengers per flight in May 2021," Ms. Shah added. ICRA, however, warned that the rise in aviation turbine fuel (ATF) prices remained a near-term challenge.

China will step up supervision of Chinese firms listed offshore, its cabinet said on Tuesday, days after Beijing launched a cybersecurity investigation into ride-hailing giant Didi Global Inc. on the heels of its U.S. stock market listing.

Under the new measures, China will improve regulation of cross-border data flows and security, crack down on illegal activity in the securities market and punish fraudulent securities issuance, market manipulation and insider trading, the cabinet said in a statement.

China will also check sources of funding for securities investment and control leverage ratios, it said.

Indian bond yields spike as crude surges

MUMBAI

Indian bond yields jumped on Tuesday as a rally in global crude oil prices raised worries about higher imported inflation, while a selection of papers for this week's bond buy-back by the central bank also disappointed investors.

The most-traded 6.64%, 2035 bond was up 6 basis points at 6.79%, while the second-highest traded 5.63%, 2026 paper rose 7 bps to 5.83%. Both bonds were trading at levels last seen in mid-March. HDFC Bank said rising oil prices and lack of liquid papers in this week's government securities acquisition programme was weighing on bond prices.

When S. Dhanalakshmi made her 400m debut at the Olympics trials in Patiala on Sunday, she felt good in the first 200m and thought the next half would go well too. But in the last 100m, she realised how difficult the quarter-mile was.

"After 300m, everything sort of switched off. I felt like I didn't have any energy left. I've never run more than 300m before," said the 23-year-old National 100m champion, who made the Indian 4x400m mixed relay team to the Tokyo Olympics after that run, in a chat with The Hindu from Patiala on Tuesday.

"Since my chances in the 100m and (4x100m) relay were over, I thought I'd have to wait another four years for the Olympics. Then our coach said, 'I will give you another chance, you try to finish at least third in the trials, I will surely take you to the Olympics,'" said the sprinter from Tiruchi who had shocked National record-holder Dutee Chand and Hima Das for the National 100m gold.

"In the last 50m, my mind was just saying, 'Olympics, Olympics'. It was close and I pushed my head forward and finished third. Running the 400m and going to the Olympics...this is something unimaginable. How can I even dream such a thing?" she said.

Bukharina was thrilled too. "After the trials, she told me I should concentrate on the 40

Sabalenka and Pliskova power through, set up a semifinal date

Jabeur finds the Belarusian too hot to handle; Golubic wilts under the Czech's onslaught; Barty to take on Kerber in the other last-four clash

AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE
LONDON

Aryna Sabalenka ended Ons Jabeur's historic run at Wimbledon on Tuesday, the second-seeded Belarus player's power getting the better of the guile of the Tunisian.

Sabalenka won 6-4, 6-3 in 74 minutes as Jabeur lost for the second time in a Grand Slam quarterfinal.

The 23-year-old Sabalenka, who had only won one match in her three previous visits to SW19, will play former World No. 1 Karolina Pliskova who eased into the last four with a straight sets win over Viktorija Golubic.

Sabalenka may sport a tiger tattoo – it prompted her parents not to speak to her for a week in 1998 – but the broadest of smiles spread across her face as she soaked up the reality of her achievement.

She will try and go one better than compatriot Victoria

Azarenka who twice reached the last four in 2011 and 2012.

"I mean I am really happy with this win," she said. "It's always tough against Ons, she's an amazing player and person. I'm happy it looks like everything is working for me."

Tough battle

Sabalenka said she was anticipating a tough battle on Thursday against Pliskova.

"It doesn't matter what happens in the past in tennis (playing Pliskova)," she said. "Pliskova's a great player and she's serving well. Her game fits really well on grass."

Pliskova's success revolves around her big serve, which rewards her with plenty of easy points and gets her out of trouble when needed.

She claimed 24 of 26 points on her serve in one stretch, hit eight aces and saved all three break points on her serve as she coasted to a 6-2, 6-2 victory over

Golubic. "I feel like I'm improving with every match," said Pliskova, the 2016 US Open runner-up. "My game has been good the last two weeks, even during training."

Pliskova averaged 106.5 mph on her first serves, 20.5 mph faster than Golubic, with the retractable roof at No. 1 Court shut because of rain.

Capacity crowd

The crowd on the No. 1 Court – and Centre Court – was at full capacity on Tuesday for the first time during the tournament after COVID-19 restrictions placed a 50% cap on attendance when the fortnight began.

Former champion Angelique Kerber reached the Wimbledon semifinals for the fourth time with a 6-2, 6-3 win over Karolina Muchova of the Czech Republic.

Ashleigh Barty outclassed unseeded compatriot Ajla Tomljanovic 6-1, 6-3 to set up a meeting with Kerber.

Hurkacz's first Grand Slam quarterfinal will come against 20-time Major champion Roger Federer.

"It's going to be fun. I'll be hoping to get a little bit of support."

On Monday, Federer eased past Italy's Lorenzo Sonego 7-5, 6-4, 6-2 to make the last eight for the 18th time.

"I felt after the first set I was able to control things. I couldn't be more excited to be in the quarters," said Federer.

England has the chance to reach a first major final since its 1966 World Cup triumph when it takes on Denmark in Wednesday's Euro 2020 semifinal, but it will need to banish a history of stumbling at this stage.

Coach Gareth Southgate has been keen to keep the burden of history out of his team's thinking, though he does not have to look back far for a warning against complacency.

An England side containing 10 of the current squad faced Denmark in October in a Nations League match and lost 1-0 to a Christian Eriksen penalty.

Eriksen, who is recovering from the shocking cardiac episode he suffered as he collapsed in Denmark's opening Euro game, will not feature at Wembley of course.

But Kasper Hjulmand's side will be largely the same as the one which left London with three points eight months ago.

Hardik bowling is a very good sign: Suryakumar

Team management and the all-rounder knew their responsibilities well

INDIA IN SRI LANKA

AMOL KARHADKAR

Innovative batsman Suryakumar Yadav has said that Hardik Pandya resuming bowling is a "very good sign" ahead of India's limited-overs series in Sri Lanka.

"He did bowl in the England series [at home earlier this year]. I was part of it – in all the T20 games, he bowled. In the deciding ODI also he bowled when the team was in a crunch situation, so it was good," Suryakumar told on Tuesday in a virtual interaction from Colombo.

"I think the team management and Hardik knew their responsibilities really well, so they were taking a call. Here, in the intra-squad game, he did bowl in the nets."

With an eye on the T20 World Cup starting on October 17, Hardik's bowling fitness will be under the scanner during India's three ODIs and as many T20Is in the island nation, to be played from July 13.

Mood upbeat

Suryakumar stressed that the mood in the camp was quite upbeat and he was looking forward to learning from Rahul Dravid who is in charge of the team. "In the few practice sessions, the intra-squad game and team meetings, the atmosphere is very calm and composed with his presence," Suryakumar said.

'Work ecosystem being reshaped by digital transformation'

The latest LinkedIn data underlines that digital roles have registered a huge surge in demand; seven out of 10 companies in India are keen on moving to a completely remote setup; and that burnout cannot be swept under the carpet

The latest LinkedIn data paints a variegated picture of the work ecosystem in India, with hope and despondency emerging as alternating colours.

Looking on the brighter side of things, digital transformation is on the ascendancy, and the demand for highly specialised tech roles is keenly felt. A sub-plot in this digital transformation story is that a large section of India Inc views remote work as an opportunity for growth, inclusion and diversity.

"A little more than 7 in 10 companies in India are keen on moving to a completely remote setup, while the proportion of entry level jobs labelled as 'remote' increased nine times between 2020 and 2021," states a note about the LinkedIn Data, adding that this development augurs well "for new grads, women professionals, and the future workforce".

The report further notes: "Both organisations and professionals have redoubled their efforts to match strides with today's increasingly digital and remote job market. More than 9 in 10 companies in India are merging roles, and looking to fill open roles internally."

The report points to an improvement in hiring rate, terming it moderate – dropping from 50% in March 2021 to 10% in April 2021, India's hiring rate on LinkedIn clambered up to 35% in May 2021.

Now, a part of the dismal picture ironically emerges from the one that looks bright. The digital transformation sweeping through the work ecosystem is making for huge demands on the workforce.
